SHIP RADIOS: FLYERS SAFE; PLANE LOST

Ruth Elder and Captain Haldeman Forced Down on Atlantic After Traveling 3,000 Miles

TANK EXPLOSION WRECKS AIRCRAFT

Aviators Come Down Near Dutch Steamer Which Is Bringing Them to Azores—Blown Off Course

S. S. BARENDRECHT, En Route to the Azores, Oct. 13.—Ruth Elder and her navigator, George W. Haldeman, landed alongside the Barendrecht, Wednesday at 10:30 a.m., on account of having no oil pressure for the last five hours of their flight. Their plane, the American Girl, encountered a storm at 4 p.m., Eastern standard time, which lasted until 2 a.m. this morning, causing the plane to be blown off its course.

Both occupants were well, but fatigued. The American Girl's plane was uninjured in landing, but while trying to land it aboard the gasoline tank exploded twice and the plane was burned with nothing saved. We intend to land the crew of the airplane at the Azores.—(Signed) Capt. Goos.

TRAVELED 3,000 MILES

PARIS, Oct. 13.—Ruth Elder failed by a scant 800 miles of accomplishing the feat of being the first woman to cross the Atlantic by airplane. She and her co-pilot, Captain Haldeman, were forced down on the waters of the Atlantic by a broken oil pipe, and tonight are safe and sound aboard the Dutch tanker Barendrecht, which rescued them. Their plane, the American Girl, was estimated to have traveled 3,000 miles along the 3,800-mile journey. The plane was destroyed by fire as the tanker was attempting to salvage it, the ship reported. The Barendrecht is en route to the Azores, where she expects to land the aviators Saturday morning.

The tanker, in a radio message, gave her position as 43° 34' N., 21° 38' W., about 325 miles north-northeast of the Azores.

PLANE FLIES TO SAVE MAN

Rice Lake Miner Fractures Skull—Aviator Brings Him 195 Miles to Winnipeg Hospital

FLIGHT MADE IN BLINDING SNOWS

WINNIPEG, Oct. 13.—On an errand of mercy, Pilot H. A. Oaks, of the Western Canada Airways, flew from the San Antonio Mines at Rice Lake to Winnipeg, a distance of 195 miles, probably saving the life of N. Hoske.

Hoske, an employee of the mine, fell twenty feet to bedrock, fracturing his skull. Officials of the mines got in touch with the airways, who dispatched a plane to the scene to bring the injured man to hospital. Winnipeg's Pilot Oaks took his charge aboard the plane, together with the physician at the mines.

Through blinding snows Oaks guided his plane, fighting strong winds. He made the 195 miles with his burden in two hours. Hoske's condition is reported as fairly good and he has good chances of recovery.

BRIGAND LIKE FEUDAL CHIEF

SICILIAN BECAME SELF-APPOINTED PROTECTOR TO NEIGHBORHOOD

Landowners, He Says, "Spontaneously" Nudged Him With Everything He Needed

PALERMO, Sicily, Oct. 13.—The story of a Sicilian robber baron, the brigand chieftain Melchiorre Candino, who became a self-appointed protector of all landowners who applied for protection against other brigands, was related at today's session of the special court sitting at Termini, which is hearing cases against the "Mafia." Candino declared that the landowners "spontaneously" supplied me with everything I needed," adding that when a particularly hard protective job was asked of him, he requested the "benevolent intervention" of Gaetano Ferraro, another bandit leader. Ferraro's uncle, it developed in the course of the proceedings, was hunted by the Carabinieri unsuccessfully for thirty-five years before he finally was imprisoned.

The charges against Gaetano would indicate him to be living on robberies, but he has indignantly denied all of them and has presented alibis.

COMMISSION BEGINS INQUIRY IN SAMOA

WELLINGTON, N.Z., Oct. 13.—C. F. Nelson, chairman of the "Samoa Citizens' Committee," giving evidence before the Royal Commission inquiring into the cause of the unrest in the Samoan Islands, declared Samoa was under a dictatorship which pursued policies against the wishes of the people. He maintained that the allegations against the medical department in the Samoan administration were false despite favorable reports thereon by Dr. Buxton Hopkins, of the London School of Tropical Medicine, and Dr. Lambert, of the Rockefeller Institute.

Nelson admitted to the Royal Commission that the financial report of the citizens' committee contained serious inaccuracies which he had been too busy to correct.

The Royal Commission is to determine whether there is any just cause for complaints made concerning New Zealand's administration of the Samoan Islands as mandated territory under the League of Nations, or whether the administrator, Sir George Richardson, had failed in his duty toward the natives of Samoa.

Indian Acquitted

MONTREAL, Oct. 13.—Orrin J. Kellogg, his wife, Mrs. Laura Corneilus Kellogg, and Chief W. K. Corneilus, were acquitted today on the charge of conspiring to obtain $15,000 by false pretenses from Canadian Indians. The jury deliberated for twenty minutes.

NO CHANCE OF FAILURE FOR TEXTILE MILL

Survey of Production Costs and Canadian Market Completely Satisfies Mr. John Moore

SITUATION HERE FULLY ANALYZED

Expert Makes Thorough Valuation of Physical Assets of Plant It Is Proposed to Move Here

"I HAVE no doubt whatever that a worsted mill will be a success here, and I am most fully and completely satisfied that it can be established without risk of failure," said Mr. John Moore, when questions were asked with regard to the status of negotiations with the City Council for the transfer of his plant here.

Discussing the situation, Mr. Moore said that since his last visit he had made a careful study of comparative production costs, and the result of his investigation had been most satisfactory. It had been decided to renew the personal conferences with the city's industrial committee, begun on the occasion of his former visit, and for that purpose he had returned to British Columbia at this time.

During his absence an experienced value had been engaged in consultation with Mr. F. A. Pauline, the Agent-General, who, the Victoria public would remember, was responsible for inviting him to make investigation of the opportunity for a worsted mill in Victoria. That value was Mr. Robert Feather, A.I.Mech.E., of Bradford and Keighley, and he had made a thorough valuation of the physical assets of the mill in Bradford. Upon that valuation, plus the price of dismantling the mill in England and its erection in Victoria, was based the cost of the proposal now before the industrial committee, together, of course, with an adequate working capital for the plant when assembled. Incidentally he explained that the Canadian Customs tariff provided for a ten per cent duty on textile machinery which would have to be figured in the cost of removal.

FINANCIAL ASPECT

The committee agreed with him that a minimum of $50,000 working capital would be required, and therefore it was proposed to capitalize a company at $250,000, of which the industrial committee would ask the Council to recommend to the ratepayers an interest of $150,000. He would take personal stock to the extent of $40,000, and $60,000 would be available for subscription, personally he preferred to see the ratepayers' interest in the project, thus limiting the responsibility of Victoria ratepayers. To this investment would be added the

TRAPPED MINERS COME OUT SAFE

Obstruction in Exit Cleared—Cage Filled With Rock Had Jammed in Shaft

SCRANTON, Pa., Oct. 13.—Between forty and fifty miners trapped in the Peck mine of the Glendale Coal Company at noon today were rescued tonight. All were in good condition and apparently suffered but slightly from their imprisonment.

The men were shut off from the outside world when a wheel in the tower of the colliery collapsed, dropping the heavy shaft holding the cage in a mine cage filled with rock. The cage ran wild down the shaft and became wedged just above the Hudak vein which is the upper level of the mine and 200 feet below the surface.

More than 200 workers in two lower veins got out through an opening in the shaft, but the clothing of some of the stouter miners was torn as they were pulled through the tiny holes in the earth. The men in the Hudak vein, however, had no other way out except through the main shaft and were forced to wait until the obstruction could be cleared.

MONSTER OCTOPUS CAUGHT IN NORTH

PRINCE RUPERT, Oct. 13.—An octopus larger than a six-foot man came up with the gear when the halibut vessel Chelsea, Captain George Bulmer, was fishing off Kodiak Island, it was reported today. Hoisted aboard the vessel the octopus wrapped its tentacles around the neck of Grant McGregor, a fisherman. Members of the crew rushed to McGregor's aid and cut him free from the entangling arms of the creature, preventing it from strangling him.

Labrador Catch Held For Price Demanded

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld., Oct. 13.—Twenty vessels of the Labrador fishing fleet, in port here with their season's catches, are holding their stock for higher prices, demanding nothing less than $4 a quintal. The fishermen are holding determinedly to their demand of a minimum of $4, which the merchants declare is prohibitive in view of the state of the foreign markets.

Novel Excuse

NEW YORK, Oct. 13.—Anna Weiner, twenty-eight, was arrested today for stealing in order to buy tombstones for her mother's and two sisters' graves.

List Issued of Magazines That Must Pay Duties

OTTAWA, Oct. 13.—A list of publications has been issued by the Department of National Revenue giving the names of those which come under the general tariff of twenty-five per cent. They are described as "periodical publications consisting almost wholly of fiction," and are as follows: Air Stories, Battle Stories, Brief Stories, Crime Mysteries, Everybody's, Eve's Own, Family Journal, Far West, Gem Library, Ghost Stories, Handy Stories, Happy Magazine, Harroworth's All Story Magazine, Horror Stories, I Confess, Magnet Library, Munsey's, My Story, Outdoor Stories, Sea Stories, Sentimental Stories, Sunday Stories, Tangles, West Weekly and Wild West Weekly.

SHIP BATTLES FURIOUS GALE

Three Members of Crew Swept Overboard—Lumber Cargo Lashed Down But Breaks Loose

STORM CONTINUES FOR THREE DAYS

LONDON, Oct. 13.—A three-day battle with a furious gale on the Atlantic in which three members of the crew were lost overboard, was described when the United States Shipping Board steamer Antinous arrived here today. The surviving members of the crew report they had been badly knocked out by the mountainous seas. After leaving Mobile, September 14, the Antinous encountered a gale on the seventh day out. The lumber cargo had been lashed down, but the violent pitching of the ship caused the bonds to break and the cargo was washed away. A vast wave swept over the starboard side of the ship, carrying off the masts and rigging. The activities of the skipper and seamen, much of the cargo was lost.

RHODES AGENT TALKS POLITICS

REPRESENTATIVE OF SCHOLARSHIP DISCUSSES BRITISH PARTIES

Mr. Lloyd George interests audience in his address to the Liberal and Laborites

WINNIPEG, Oct. 13.—Mr. Lloyd George is still the strongest individual draught in Great Britain, declared Mr. Philip Kerr, who for five years was secretary to the former Premier of Britain, and who arrived here today. Mr. Kerr said that he believed that Lloyd George may yet hold a responsible office in the British Government.

"He still is the man people to his addresses than any other speaker in the Old Country and he is as active and vigorous as ever," Mr. Kerr said.

LABORITES AND LIBERALS

The main question in England now, he added, was whether the Liberals and Labor would be able to come together and not fight, and to combine against the Conservatives at the next general elections, which Mr. Kerr predicts, will be either next Fall or Winter.

Many are working now, he said, to combine the Liberal and Labor forces to that end.

Mr. Kerr is traveling for the Rhodes Trust, meeting Rhodes scholars in different parts of the world.

CITIZENSHIP IN U.S. REFUSED TO PACIFIST

CHICAGO, Oct. 13.—A Federal judge today denied application for American citizenship to Madame Rosika Schommer, originator of the Ford Peace Ship plan, to end the World War, after she made negative reply to his hypothetical question as to whether she would kill an enemy in the United States in time of war, if by so doing she could save the life of an American soldier.

"I would not kill a man even if he tried to kill me," Madame Schommer, fifty-four years old, and a Hungarian subject, told Federal Judge George A. Carpenter.

"That's enough," interjected the court. "The petition is denied."

ANOTHER WOMAN TO TRY FLIGHT

OLD ORCHARD, Me., Oct. 13.—After a day in which the elements did their best to spoil the projected flight to Copenhagen, the crew of the Sikorsky plane the Dawn, made fresh plans tonight for a start at low tide tomorrow morning.

All seemed greatly pleased with the manner in which the amphibian arrived through its two-hour ordeal, when an unusually high tide augmented by strong southeast winds tore the ship and buffeted with high rollers.

Mrs. Francis W. Grayson expects to be the first woman to set foot on European soil, after a transatlantic flight.

Novel Excuse

NEW YORK, Oct. 13.—Anna Weiner, twenty-eight, was arrested today for stealing in order to buy tombstones for her mother's and two sisters' graves.

MILO EGGER IS FREED BY ASSIZE JURY

Inquisitorial Body Returns Verdict of "Not Guilty" After Deliberating on Evidence for 25 Minutes

PRISONER LEAVES FOR SEATTLE HOME

Mr. J. A. Russell Expresses Desire for Government to Pay Expenses of Witnesses for the Defence

MILO Eggers, who fought extradition proceedings in the United States for two years and was brought to Canada in May last to stand trial on a charge of robbery with violence arising out of the hijacking of the two liquor-carrying launches the Haddel and Kynak, on March 4, 1924, in the waters of the Gulf of Georgia, was acquitted by the Assize Court jury which tried the case here yesterday, and he walked from the prisoner's dock a free man.

The trial, which created unusual interest, not only in Victoria but throughout the Northwest and the Pacific Coast region, occupied two whole days, and it was not until 4:20 p.m. yesterday that the case went to the jury.

The jurors deliberated for twenty-five minutes on the case, and then slowly walked into the courtroom, which was crowded to capacity, many spectators having to stand in the corridors.

The jury was asked if they had reached a verdict.

"NOT GUILTY"

"Yes, we find Milo Eggers not guilty," Mr. Frederick Charles Cox, foreman of the jury, declared.

The announcement of the acquittal, which was unexpected by those who had followed the trial from start to finish, created a stir in the courtroom, and Eggers, as he walked out of the dock, was embraced by his mother and sister, while his father gave him a firm handshake.

His wife, who testified on his behalf during the trial, was not present in the court when the verdict was brought in.

Milo's countenance was wreathed in smiles, and he visibly showed his delight in the jury's action in vindicating him of the serious charge on which he stood trial here.

Eggers, accompanied by his wife, his sister and parents, left for Seattle last night on the Ss. Emma Alexander.

PUBLIC WORKS CHIEF COMING

FEDERAL MINISTER TO ARRIVE IN VICTORIA SATURDAY MORNING

He is Visiting Province in Order to Make Report on Public Works Required

VANCOUVER, Oct. 13.—Expansion of the general postoffice will be chief among public works projects in British Columbia to be considered by Hon. J. C. Elliott, Federal Minister of Public Works, who arrived in the city Thursday night on a western tour.

"The progress of the West has been so rapid, and the schemes laid before our department so many that it is difficult to judge which are the most essential, and the same time keep within the budget," Mr. Elliott declared.

GATHERING DATA

"I am getting further data on the postoffice, armories, harbor bridges and dredging, Fraser River bridges and other projects while I am here so that I may submit the approved estimates to the coming session of parliament," he continued.

"The definite announcement as to what the Government expects to build here in the near future should come early next year."

Friday, Mr. Elliott will address a luncheon meeting of the Laurier Club. In the afternoon he will proceed to New Westminster to look over the various projects there and on the Fraser River, leaving at night for Victoria, where he will inspect the Esquimalt developments Saturday.

He expects to return to Vancouver Sunday to visit the Government dredging undertakings at Powell River.

MR. BENNETT GOES EAST

To Clear Up Private Businesses and Resign Positions—Leaves Winnipeg for New York

ONTARIO PREMIER WARMLY SUPPORTS

WINNIPEG, Man., Oct. 13.—Hon. R. B. Bennett, who was elected yesterday to the leadership of the Conservative Party of Canada, before leaving for New York today, told the Canadian Press he had started to clear up his private business prior to entering actively upon the duties of the leadership.

Mr. Bennett will arrive in New York City early on Sunday morning to keep a business appointment arranged this afternoon. In all probability, he will return to Calgary direct.

About October 30 the new chief will assume the mantle of Conservative leadership. Despite reports to the contrary, Mr. Bennett has not arranged any speaking itinerary.

DELEGATES DEPARTING

With the election of a permanent leader and the passing of more than twenty resolutions on vital national questions, the remaining delegates from various provinces are gradually leaving Winnipeg. All the aspirants for the leadership have departed. Hon. R. J. Manion and Sir Henry Drayton left this evening, while Hon. Hugh Guthrie, opposition house leader last session, and C. H. Cahoon, member for St. Lawrence-St. George, took train for the East this morning. Hon. Robert Rogers, whose name was also floated upon, resides in this city. Tomorrow afternoon Sir George Peck, former High Commissioner for Canada, will entrain for Ottawa, and Hon. H. H. Stevens will depart for Vancouver. Large contingents of the rank and file have also made arrangements to start their journey homeward within the next twenty-four hours.

GET CLEAR OF BUSINESS

Interviewed before he left, Mr. Bennett said that he had no further statement to make at present. "This is my busiest day," he added. "You know acceptance of the leadership of my party means that I must at once resign a whole lot of my positions that have meant much to me. Today I am starting to do it."

"I cannot, however, let this opportunity pass without expressing my very great appreciation of the kindness shown to me by everyone."

"I am sorry that I can not yet issue a statement as leader of the party. The whole thing is so new and I have so many things to do."

Replying to the message from Right Hon. Mackenzie King, congratulating him upon his election to the leadership of the Conservative Party, Hon. R. B. Bennett telegraphed as follows today:

"Your message is highly appreciated. The generous acceptance of my election as leader of the Conservative Party by political opponents brings deep gratification, and I know it will be our common endeavor to serve the interests of our country and maintain the high traditions of British parliamentary institutions."

PREMIER FERGUSON

Hon. G. Howard Ferguson, Premier of Ontario, expressed satisfaction at the leadership selection made by the convention.

"We have chosen a winner, there is no doubt about that," he declared. "Mr. Bennett will do a great deal to link up the East and West more closely. He is broadminded enough to see that the interests of the whole country are looked after, and he will do a tremendous amount of good from the national standpoint."

Major-General A. D. McRae, M.P. for Vancouver North, and general organizer of the convention, said he was delighted at the choice which has been made.

Fort Churchill IS "DENNING UP"

Making Snug for Winter at Hudson Bay Port—Employees to Leave Via Strait

OTTAWA, Oct. 13.—At Fort Churchill, the new terminus of the Hudson Bay Railway, things are being made snug for the winter and most of the hundred and fifty employees are leaving the port within the next day or two on board the Government Steamship Raider. They will come out by Hudson Strait, where the Royal Canadian Air Force surveys are proceeding.

Since the decision of the department to change the Bay port from Nelson to Churchill, most of the department's equipment has been shipped north. Barges with coal and supplies have moved along the coast to Churchill harbor, where the permanent staff is settling down for the winter. Some air surveys are being made this Fall for the department, and they will be resumed again in the Spring. The work is being done by a private company.

Italy Asked to Restore Portion of Papal State As Condition of Accord

Vatican Organ Declares That It Is Absolutely Necessary for Pope to Be Sovereign in Some Territory, No Matter How Small, as Evidence of Spiritual Liberty

Conference With Mussolini Thought To Have Led to Suggestion Published

ROME, Oct. 13.—For the first time since it lost its "Temporal Power," more than fifty years ago, the Vatican has taken a decisive step towards solution of the "Roman question." The Osservatore Romano, mouthpiece of the Vatican, has laid down conditions upon which the whole struggle between the Church and the State might come to an end. First of all, the newspaper reiterates the absolute necessity of the Holy See having some kind of territory, no matter how tiny, in order to convince everybody of the complete liberty and independence of the Pope in the spiritual government of the Church.

In other words, the Osservatore suggests that another State should be formed, similar to the Republics of San Marino and Andorra, the principality of Monaco and the Grand Duchy of Luxembourg, which would exist as independent with no threat to neighboring nations.

The present suggestion of The Osservatore is practically a resumption of the project advanced before the war by Cardinal Bourne, Archbishop of Westminster, who argued that as there are Lords in England who possess estates larger than the Republic of San Marino, similar estates might be created for the Pope.

Silence Invited For Two Minutes Armistice Day

OTTAWA, Oct. 13.—The following announcement was issued by the Prime Minister here this afternoon with respect to Armistice Day observance:

"In accordance with arrangements for the observance of Armistice Day, sanctioned by His Majesty the King, the people of Canada are invited to mark the occasion by a two-minute silence at 11 o'clock, Friday morning, November 11, 1927. This is a special observance suggested by His Majesty and is in addition to the regular celebration of the date recognized by the Canadian Parliament for the Monday previous."

The Osservatore's editorial produced a general feeling that the Vatican organ could not possibly express such determined opinions on the solution of the "Roman Question" without knowing that some papal parlers on the subject had been going on between the Holy See and the Italian Government. It is, in fact, known that it is the ambition of the Mussolini Government to put an end to the conflict between the Church and State which for fifty-seven years has affected the life of the nation.

MR. G. B. SHAW ON ITALIAN RULER

Dramatist Writes in Praise of Mussolini—Comparison Made With Napoleon

TURIN, Italy, Oct. 13.—George Bernard Shaw has reaffirmed his belief in Premier Mussolini in a letter published in Gazzetta del Popolo. The letter was in the form of a reply to one written by Friedrich Adler, Austrian editor, to an English newspaper, attacking Shaw for his views on Mussolini. Shaw is quoted as saying that one must treat with respect a man of a foreign state who has established a dictatorship in a great and modern country without any social, official or academic co-operation, but with only his "blackshirts". Italy, after the World War, was left in a situation analogous to that which Napoleon found in France on his return from his Egyptian campaign. Shaw declares, Mussolini did for Italy what Napoleon did for France, the letter says.

Discussing at length the subject of dictatorship or democracy, Shaw asserts that the despotic lira is worth threepence in English money, while the democratic franc is worth only twopenny.

Italy, declares Shaw, is governed by a man who is the product of the people, while France, free, equal and brotherly, is ruled by a Poincaré. Mussolini, despite his impulsive acts which may appear menacing, has not yet damaged the Nile, separated the waters of Egypt or piled open Bakosky's strong box. In imitation of England, says Shaw, if one compares Italy with the Utopia of Mazzini, Italy will appear plainly abused and tyrannical. Shaw declares, but likewise is America, France, England and Russia.

Shaw concludes by saying that nothing is to be gained by insistently making charges against Fascism, because Fascism could respond "Tu quoque." "thou also."

Defects attributed to the Mussolini Government are neither Fascist nor Italian. They are defects of human nature, he declares.

After the verdict had been returned, Mr. J. A. Russell, counsel for Eggers, arose and stated to Mr. Justice Murphy, the presiding judge, that under the Extradition Treaty the practice now was for the State extrajudicially to pay the traveling expenses and witness fees of the defense, providing the accused was successful in gaining acquittal.

His Lordship said that that matter could come up for argument later. The jury which had been given the case was composed of the following members: Mr. Frederick Charles Cox, foreman, and Messrs. John MacLachlan, James Baird, James Carmichael, James Henry Cardwell, George Stanley Eden, William Madison, William Francis Drinkell, William Laurison, Henry Kenyon, John Neilson and Frederick William Spedding.

ADDRESSES JURY

Mr. J. A. Russell, defence counsel, began his address to the jury at 2:10 p.m. and spoke for an hour. He asked the jury to look at the case from the standpoint of fair play. He pointed out that because Eggers was seated in the prisoner's dock did not mean that the accused was guilty. The jury was there to see that Eggers obtained a fair trial. This young man wanted to clear himself of the offence for which he was charged, and his family also wished to see Milo exonerated.

"It is your duty to keep an open mind until you have heard the last word from His Lordship. The facts are in your province, and it is for you to say, each of you individually, whether there was any evidence at all implicating the accused in the crime of piracy," said Mr. Russell.

Defence counsel declared that the Crown had established a strong case of hijacking and robbery, that the launch Hadel, with its cargo of 292 cases of Scotch whisky, was taken possession of in Peary Cove by four men who wore masks and carried rifles.

"Those four men," contended Mr. Russell, "were essentially murderers, cold-blooded characters, and should not be entitled to any consideration whatever. And if these four persons or any one of them were in this court today, I think they would be your duty to find them guilty."

"Four men were responsible for that hijacking, and the question is, who were they, or who was the fifth of them? Was the accused one of them? Look at him in the box. Does he look like a person who would take part in an unjustifiable act of piracy, would load a vessel of its cargo, and shoot or aim at the shooting of a man on a launch? I say no, and I am sure you will agree with me."

CLAIMS NO CONNECTION

"Recall the evidence that has been given, and can you say that there was any evidence that he was one of these four men? On the contrary, I believe that you will find that beyond a peradventure of a doubt there was nothing that in any way connected him with the hijacking of the Hadel and Kyak."

Mr. Russell asked the jury to consider the evidence of Larum, helmsman of the launch Hadel, who was shot by one of the pirates. "Did Larum say that Eggers was the man?" No.

"Adolf Ongestad outlined the abominable, non-British, rotten, criminal act in Canadian waters."

but he tells you that he cannot identify any one of the four men who participated in the crime. "Then take Martin's evidence. He said one of the men had his mask off practically all night. He had every opportunity, then, of seeing this man, his height, his features, his hair, his clothing. And yet, what did he say when asked if the accused was that man? He answered: 'I can't do it. I'm not sure.' I can't say that Eggers is the man. The man who removed the mask was light complected and had blue eyes, Martin said."

Mr. Russell asked the jurors if they thought such evidence would justify them in saying that Milo Eggers had anything to do with the hijacking.

"Then we have Weibstadt, Larum's partner in the boat that brought the liquor from Vancouver to the Gulf. He told you that the information received by the source of it was not told. Why didn't I cross-examine him on it? Because there was no evidence connecting or implicating the accused."

EDWARDS' TESTIMONY

Joe Edwards, who was with Martin on board the launch Kyak, which came from Seattle to take delivery of this liquor, did not appear in court. Edwards, at the preliminary hearing, said that the pirate who removed his mask was a light complected man, but he did not attempt to identify the accused one of the pirates.

"I ask you, Gentlemen of the Jury, is there anything against Milo Eggers in this case, except he has a fair face and blue eyes. And are there not many other persons in the world who are light complected and whose eyes are blue?" concluded Mr. Russell.

Mr. Archie M. Johnson, K.C., in addressing the jury, defined his position as Crown Prosecutor. He said it was his duty to ascertain the whole truth. He had stated at the outset of the trial that he was going to prove that Larum and Ongestad were in the boat Hadel in Canadian waters on March 4, 1924, that four men, armed with rifles and pistols, came alongside and hijacked that boat, and that 292 cases of liquor were stolen, and he believed he had proved these things.

The jury was not concerned whether the Hadel had broken the customs laws or any other regulations, for rum-running had nothing to do with the issue. It didn't matter, he said, who laid the charge against Eggers or whether Eggers was charged along with a number of persons.

The Grand Jury had a question to ask against the accused, and the latter was on trial here for committing robbery with violence.

THE BURDEN OF PROOF

"The burden of proof always rests upon the Crown," Mr. Johnson told the jury. "You can eliminate the alibi evidence given by defence witnesses, but the Crown still has to prove beyond a question of doubt, that Eggers was one of the pirates."

After commenting upon the alibi evidence given by defence witnesses, and of Milo Eggers' visit to bootleggers, Mr. Johnson said that the newspapers the names of the Eggers brothers in connection with the Hadel hijacking. Mr. Johnson said that the matter of identification rested upon the evidence of two Crown witnesses, Martin and Edwards.

"There is some identification. The weight and value of it I leave to you," the Crown Prosecutor declared.

Mr. Johnson stated that Martin had told the court he couldn't definitely identify the accused as being the man who removed his mask.

Edwards, he said, when asked if the accused was one of the pirates, replied that he wouldn't say so. He was asked to describe the man who took off his mask, and while it was a long time since the affair occurred, he thought he was a light complected man, around twenty-six or twenty-seven years of age, five foot six or five foot seven in height, and weighing between 150 and 165 pounds.

"My submission to you is," said Mr. Johnson, "that that is not a bad description of Milo Eggers."

Crown Prosecutor declared that Martin had testified he thought the pirate was "a light complected man, around twenty-six or twenty-seven years of age, blue eyes, five feet ten inches in height, and weighing about 160 pounds."

REMEMBER DESCRIPTION

The act of piracy occurred on March 4, 1924, and yet three years later both Mr. Martin and Edwards were able to remember a description of the man.

In concluding, Mr. Johnson told the jury that the question for them to determine was whether there was before them sufficient evidence to lead them to believe that Milo Eggers was one of the four pirates that hijacked the Hadel and Kyak.

Mr. Justice Murphy began delivering his charge to the jury at 3:40 p.m. at the conclusion of the four hours' discussion. The burden of proof, he said, was on the Crown. He pointed out that there were two principles, both of which were highly favorable to the accused, to be observed. The first was that the jury was to violate those principles if they did, they would be violating their oaths.

The two principles were, firstly, that the man is presumed innocent until he is proven guilty, and secondly, that every man must be proved guilty beyond a reasonable doubt.

Lordship told the jury that they were not in court to decide whether the Crown or defence was the most probable. The burden of proof, he said, was on the Crown. He pointed out that there were two principles, both of which were highly favorable to the accused, to be observed. The first was that the jury was to violate those principles if they did, they would be violating their oaths.

Turning to the matter of alibi evidence, Mr. Justice Murphy stated that if an alibi defence was true, it was the best defence for an innocent man. However, it must be remembered that an alibi was easy to manufacture, and the hardest to break down.

Summing up the facts in the case, the court pointed out that the jury was to decide whether or not the accused was one of the four pirates.

who did the hijacking at Peter's Cove on March 4, 1924. His Lordship said the Crown admitted that there was very little identification evidence before the jury, only the testimony of two witnesses. In considering evidence, the jury must consider what was said, and whether they believed it. In reviewing the identification evidence, His Lordship said Martin said the court that he couldn't definitely identify Eggers as one of the pirates. The man who removed his mask on the boat, according to Martin, was light complected and had blue eyes. Witness stated that the said pirate was a little heavier man than the accused, and that Eggers was a little shorter.

EDWARDS NOT CERTAIN

The court then recalled what Joe Edwards, who was with Martin on the Kyak, had said concerning the man who had removed his mask. Edwards would not say positively whether the accused was that man. "That is all the evidence you have of identification. If you can't say that, that evidence proves beyond a reasonable doubt that Eggers was one of the robbers, then you must acquit him. If you are satisfied the evidence proves beyond doubt that Eggers was at the scene of the hijacking, then you must find him guilty," concluded His Lordship.

The jury then retired from the courtroom, returning twenty-five minutes later with its verdict of "not guilty."

In support of the defence alibi that Eggers was not at the scene of the piracy in the Gulf of Georgia on March 4, 1924, but was on that date in Seattle, a number of witnesses took the stand. Mrs. Milo Eggers, his wife; Mrs. P. Eggers, his mother; workers engaged with "Pop" Eggers in Seattle, one of whom informed the court, that at one family on the waterfront, and referred to Milo as "His Nibbs," swore the accused was in Seattle on the day of the hijacking, and another swore that Milo was at a prizefight in Seattle during the evening of March 4—the day of the hijacking.

CLOSELY CROSS-EXAMINED

Every witness called by J. A. Russell, counsel for Eggers, was keenly cross-examined by A. M. Johnson, K.C., Crown counsel, who checked their evidence closely with that given during the extradition proceedings in Tacoma and questioned them at length as to how they were able to fix so clearly the events of March 4 over three years ago that Milo's movements on that particular day.

Mrs. Eggers, Sr., mother of Milo, questioned on Milo's movements a day or two before the trial, and after, clashed with Crown counsel.

"Why do you ask such foolish questions?" she asked, as counsel first questioned after question at her. To another question she replied, "I have already told you that."

"You may have told my learned friend not me," said Mr. Johnson. "Well, if you have heard me say it to him, what is the difference?" she sharply retorted.

She held firmly to her story that she fixed the date of the prizefight, but admitted under cross-examination she took no interest in sport and had no reason to remember this particular fight beyond hearing Milo and friends talk about it.

MRS. MILO EGGER

Mrs. Milo Eggers, wife of the accused, stated that they were married in Centralia, Wash., in 1921. She testified that Milo's movements on the date of the hijacking and several days prior to it. She and her husband had been together in Seattle every night during February and March in 1924.

Under cross-examination she said she could not say whether they slept at Mrs. Eggers' house or her mother's house on the night of March 4. They had no home of their own at the time. She had breakfast with him on the morning of March 4, and had lunch with him.

"Did you have lunch with him on March 3?" asked Crown counsel.

"No."

"Do you distinctly remember having lunch with him on March 4?" "I am not sure."

Questioned closely she recalled the name of the theatre she went to with him on March 3, which she had not been able to do at previous proceedings.

"Why can you remember better now than in April, 1924, on that point?" asked Crown counsel.

"I don't know," replied witness.

"You have thought it over and discussed it since, has you not?" "There is no harm in it," said Mr. Johnson.

FLATLY DENIES CHARGE

Milo Eggers took the stand in his own defence, and denied emphatically that he had anything to do with the hijacking of the Hadel and Kyak on March 4, 1924, in any way, shape or form.

He was the agent nor the principal of the hijacking episode, but was in Seattle at a prize fight on the night in question, he asserted. He said he had never been on the Hadel or Kyak. He had never been to Pender Island, although he had an idea where it was. He had not known, he said, either Martin or Edwards, nor had he met them, until the proceedings in Tacoma in March, 1926.

The accused, who intimated that he was in the American Army during the war, and had worked for his father since he was discharged, told the court that he had done certain work for Chris Olson, and received his pay from him on March 4, 1924. He was paid $28 for repacking fish, being compensated at a rate of forty words for the seventy barrels he repacked.

Questioned concerning the movements of Finch, his father's partner, Milo Eggers said that Finch returned on March 3 from a trip to California, and he recalled seeing Finch at his work on either March 3 or 4.

In 1924, witness said in answer to Crown counsel's questions, there were eight members of the family. His four brothers, Peter, thirty-eight years of age, who was a rancher near Seattle; Theodore, thirty-two; Ariel, twenty-nine, and the witness.

Theodore was not working in March, 1924. Ariel was an engineer for a tugboat company. "Was he running speed boats?" "No." "Do you say he never ran speed boats at all?" "No, I didn't say that." "Did he or did he not run speed boats prior to March, 1924?" "It is possible he did."

"Where did Theodore live March, 1924?" "He was not living in Seattle. He was in Georgia."

"That was where he was confined?" "Yes."

ENTERS OBJECTION

Counsel for accused rose to object, claiming Crown counsel was seeking to attach odium to accused. The judge declined to stop cross-examination at this stage.

"Where did Ariel live in 1924?" "In Seattle."

"Did you ever come to British Columbia in 1924?" "Yes, to buy fish."

"Did you ever come to buy liquor?" "I have never trafficked in liquor."

Mr. Russell objected on the grounds Crown counsel was suggesting to the jury accused had committed other crimes. The judge refused to intercede.

"Did you ever know your family was known as the Eggers gang?" proceeded Crown counsel.

"I have heard that expression." "What did it convey to you?"

Witness hesitated in his answer and counsel passed the question. Mr. Johnson interrogated Eggers concerning his first arrest on this charge in San Francisco in November, 1924, and asked him whether he had escaped.

Eggers said he would not say that he escaped, but asserted that his attorney there had told him he was justified in going.

Milo told the court of visiting a bootlegger to ascertain who had given the names of the Eggers brothers in connection with the Hadel hijacking. He said he also consulted several attorneys about rumors that he had heard, for he didn't like his family getting notoriety.

Mr. Johnson: "You never sued the papers for libel, then?" "No."

"Did you write the papers, denying the articles involving you and your brothers?" "I did not."

"Nor write to the editor, demanding a retraction?" "No."

"I suggest to you that it was your first impulse to go to a bootlegger?" "I wanted to find out something about who gave the names to the newspapers."

"Well, what did you do about the matter, anyway?" "I dropped it."

WENT TO CALIFORNIA

Mr. Johnson asked the accused if he did not go to California several months after March, 1924. Eggers answered affirmatively. "You were working in your father's fishing plant?" "I was."

"Well, why did you leave a good job in Seattle to go to California?" Crown counsel queried.

The accused did not give any reason. Mr. Johnson asked Eggers if anyone identified him at Tacoma. Objection was raised by Mr. Russell.

His Lordship sustained the objection. Mr. Johnson said he would close his cross-examination there.

Mr. Russell asked Eggers what weight he was in March, 1924, 140 pounds.

"What height were you at that time?" "Five foot, eight inches."

"And what is your weight and height today?"

"The same as it was in March, 1924."

George F. Wall, fish broker, Seattle, told the court that Milo Eggers was engaged on the waterfront on March 4. Harold MacMillan said he accompanied Milo to a prize fight in Seattle on the night of the hijacking in Canadian waters. He did not know where Eggers went after he left him following the fight, he said. Witness declared he did not know anyone else at the boxing tournament.

DUNCAN COMPANY LOSES JUDGMENT

Court of Appeals Dismisses Appeal Against Interlocutory Order for George Mair

VANCOUVER, Oct. 12.—Sustaining a preliminary objection, argued by a respondent, the Court of Appeals has dismissed an appeal by Duncan Lumber Company, Limited, from an order of Mr. Justice Gregory.

The respondent, George Mair, of Windsor, Ont., representing a syndicate owning timber on the P.O.E. Highway, above Squamish, in 1922 entered into an agreement for sale with one, Wright. The latter, it was alleged, sold the timber to defendant company. The contract with Wright was cancelled by Mair on the ground that Wright had made default, but the Duncan Lumber Company, Limited, insisted that it was entitled to timber under its arrangement with Wright, so that action was commenced by Mair for an injunction and eviction from the limits.

An injunction was granted by Mr. Justice Gregory after trial in Supreme Court, and he referred to the registrar the question of the amount of timber which had been cut by the company. On this registrar's report, his lordship arranged to determine the damages.

Counsel for Mair argued that this order was interlocutory and should have been appealed in fifteen days, whereas for a final order the time is three months. The appeal had not been taken in fifteen days and the Court of Appeal held that the order was interlocutory and dismissed the appeal.

Politicians' Wives

LONDON, Oct. 13.—Interesting comment is being made on the fact that the new leader of the Conservative Party of Canada, Hon. R. B. Bennett, like Premier W. L. King and Earl Balfour, is a bachelor.

WARNINGS ARE GIVEN PUBLIC

Ten Commandments for Prevention of Fire Are Suggested by Agents' Association

CASOLINE PERIL IS STRESSED

Now that Fire Prevention Week is in full swing the Victoria and District Fire Agents' Association wishes to call the attention of the public to the following ten commandments which have been prepared by the Dominion Fire Commission at Ottawa.

It is requested that these commandments be studied very carefully and all citizens do their bit to follow all of the instructions therein:

1. Have all flues and chimneys properly cleaned before attempting to use them.
2. Look very carefully at the chimney or flue, at the point just above the peak of the roof where the chimney goes through, as the lower part may have settled and the upper portion, being held up by the roof timbers, may have pulled away, leaving an open space or break in the chimney that will permit sparks slipping through into the attic or concealed space.
3. Be sure that all flue holes that are not to be used this year have good metal stops, as innumerable fires have been caused by sparks through papering over unused pipe holes in chimneys.
4. Be careful that the supply of kindling wood is not piled up in the yard in such a manner as to carry fire to your house, in case your neighbor's house should burn.
5. Clean the ventilating collars around all flues, removing all lint, cobwebs and dust, leaving nothing in the ventilator, in this way permitting the air to cool the pipe where it goes through the roof.
6. It is best to keep all light wood, kindlings and boxes in sheds, stables or basements, in orderly piles, and not to have papers or excelsior mixed with it.
7. Extra caution should be used in the handling of gasoline. In the winter months all windows and doors are closed, eliminating the possibility of the air blowing the inflammable vapors away.
8. Never use gasoline inside the house for cleaning, and when compelled to use it for any other purpose do not forget that you are handling a powerful explosive which may endanger your life and property.
9. Remove all dry grass and leaves from your premises before someone carelessly throws a match away.
10. Do not dry clothing and inflammable materials above or near hot stoves.

OLDEST CHURCH WILL BE RAZED

Former First Presbyterian Church to Be Removed as Land Is Required for Street Improvements

MANY NOTABLE EVENTS RECALLED

The former First Presbyterian Church, now used to house second-hand stores, situated on the corner of Pandora Avenue and Blanshard Street, will be demolished by the city, to whom the property has been reverted. Notices of removal have been posted, the land being required for street improvements. At this point the street will be widened, being a bottle neck leading into the widest portion of Blanshard Street.

In 1862 the infant Presbyterian Church acquired a site for the church building, and in April, 1863, the foundation stone was laid by Hon. D. Cameron, chief justice of the colony. The building was completed with the emblematic Scottish thistle on the steeple and dedicated in November, 1863, in the pastorate of Rev. John Hall.

The congregation divided in 1866, when St. Andrew's came into being, the first church occupied by that congregation being dedicated in April, 1869, and still remains, shorn of its ecclesiastical character, on the corner of Courtney and Gordon Streets. During the pastorate of Rev. Donald Fraser in 1891, the first church was enlarged and the capacity doubled. Rev. Dr. Campbell came in 1892, and was for many years identified with the pastorate.

The church was not abandoned for religious services until the present First Church was occupied on Quadra Street.

After the fire, which destroyed the original Christ Church Cathedral, the First Presbyterian church was used by the Anglicans until the present cathedral building was finished. It was then about that time that the Rev. Dr. Edwards, Bishop of the Reformed Episcopal Church, was tried at an ecclesiastical court held in the First Church building, when charged by Bishop Hills with a breach of church rules.

SYNOD HEARS REV. DR. MACBETH

Too Much Time, Says Retiring Moderator, Is Wasted in Trivial Conversations

VANCOUVER, Oct. 13.—The Presbyterian Synod of British Columbia, now meeting in the Central Church, Vancouver, listened to an eloquent sermon by the retiring moderator, Dr. R. G. MacBeth, who chose as his subject, "The Danger of Aimless Pursuit."

Among other things, the speaker called attention to the great waste of time in trivial conversations. People today, said he, speak slightly of the Puritans, forgetting that they were men with a purpose in life. Referring to the growth of the Canadian church, the moderator stated that the forty-eight millions of Presbyterians throughout the world had a purpose in life, and that was to make Jesus Christ known to men.

A somewhat lengthy discussion arose on the report of the committee on evangelism. It was finally agreed to petition the General Assembly to appoint specially endowed and duly qualified men as evangelists, whose work would be the visitation of remote congregations, in order to counteract the false teachings so prevalent today and also to evangelize.

The new moderator for the coming year is the Rev. Duncan Campbell, of Chilliwack. It is expected the meetings of the Synod will continue for several days.

WALDRON WILL BE TRIED HERE

Petit Jury in Assize Court Will Hear Charge of Unlawful Possession of Narcotic Drugs

REX VS. D. S. FLYAN TRIAL ADJOURNED

The trial of Rex vs. James Waldron will be proceeded with this morning before Mr. Justice Murphy in the Assize Court at 10:30 o'clock. Waldron will be arraigned on a charge of being unlawfully in possession of narcotic drugs on the evening of July 16 last at the Panama Hotel, Johnson Street. The Grand Jury returned a "true bill" in the case this week.

The accused was committed for trial in the City Police Court by Magistrate George Jay on August 20, 1927, Waldron on that occasion stoutly declaring his innocence of the charge against him. He has been lodged in Oakalla jail since his committal.

It is alleged by the police that Waldron had four phials of drugs, containing opium, heroin, cocaine and morphine in his room when they searched it for narcotics.

Mr. Henry C. Hall, K.C., will be Crown Prosecutor at the Waldron trial today, while Mr. Stuart Henderson will appear as counsel for the defence.

On the application of Mr. R. W. Eyr, of Vancouver, counsel for Donald F. Flyn, who faces a charge of committing an act of gross indecency in public, Mr. Justice Murphy yesterday granted an adjournment of the trial until Monday morning next.

ESTEVAN LEAVES FOR YELLOW ISLE

Indian Hieroglyphics at East End of Rocky Islet May Be Far Dated Translation

The Canadian Government vessel Estevan left here yesterday morning for Yellow Island, off the East coast of Vancouver Island, with material for a new dwelling for the light keeper.

Yellow Island, in Bayes Sound, was named by admiralty surveyors in 1860, because of the light colored rock of which it is composed. At the east end are a number of Indian hieroglyphics carved on the face of the cliff, the meaning of which is unknown. A lighthouse was established on the east end of the island in 1891, and a smaller one added at the west end in 1898, forming a fairway mark for passing through the narrow portion of the strait entrance to Bayes Sound.

THE HARM OF PREJUDICE

It has been truly said that if one were to know all about a grain of sand he would know about the universe and, therefore, have infinite intelligence. In every age, the prevailing customs have appeared quite natural to those who grow up in such surroundings. We are so trained to believe that some things are good and others are bad, that it is one of the hardest things to realize that the things we have thought "bad" are "good" to others, and that possibly if we had a better understanding of them they would seem to us true and good.

If we allow our teachers, companions, or the writers of books to think for us, we must become prejudiced towards things we do not understand. A presumption that things are not good is often based wholly on feeling, fancies, or habits of association, and upon half-investigated facts.

For instance, how many people who have lived in Germany and really understand the German people believe them to be naturally cruel and inhuman in treatment of other races? Millions of Canadians are still prejudiced by the false propaganda circulated during war times to produce antagonism toward the German people. Many thousands will never change their opinions during their lives because they will not have the opportunity to learn that the Germans are a most lovable and charitable people.

Every prejudice you hold is a little devil inside of you and will not only make you intolerant through ignorance, but will slowly and surely undermine your health. The one whose viewpoint

SCIENTISTS WAR ON TUBER PEST

Government Officials Successful in Efforts to Restrict Spread of Colorado Potato Beetle

Efforts of Provincial Government officials to control the Colorado potato beetle menace in districts east of Kootenay Lake have met with success this year, according to reports received by Dr. David Warnock, Deputy Minister of Agriculture.

The potato beetle pest in this province is centred in the district to the east of Kootenay Lake. For the past three years the Department of Agriculture has striven to confine the disease to this area with entire success.

This year the Dominion Government assigned Mr. A. A. Denys, Federal entomologist, to assist Provincial Government officials in the campaign against the disease. Using this year a mixture of hydrated lime and calcium arsenate, developed after experimentation by the Oliver Chemical Company at Penticton, the scientists have met with considerable success. There is hope, Dr. Warnock says, that they will yet be able to stamp out the disease.

The great difficulty is to prevent reinestation through shipments of grain and straw and other agricultural products into the province from Idaho and the Prairies.

The Colorado potato beetle is the chief reason for the British embargo on potatoes from the United States and Canada. The pest is prevalent in Ontario and Quebec as well as in the United States, but so far has been confined to the area east of Kootenay Lake in British Columbia.

In England and in Ontario the same chemical substance is being used to fight the potato pest. It is dusted over the potato fields from aeroplanes in the early morning hours.

Continuance of British Connection Is Forecast By Premier Taschereau

In an outstanding speech which featured the inauguration of the University of Toronto's centennial celebration, Hon. L. A. Taschereau, Premier of Quebec, congratulated the university on attaining its centenary; praised the settlement of the school language question in Ontario, remarked on the happy results of the work of the Fathers of Confederation and declared his belief in Canada and the British Empire.

Premier Taschereau's speech was one of two to be made on "Aspects of Canadian History Since Confederation" and was as follows:

"My first words will be to express my feelings of gratitude to the University of Toronto for having invited me to participate in the celebration of its centenary. While I appreciate personally the honor of addressing you, I take this invitation as a tribute to my province and a token of friendship which moves me deeply. Science and learning know no boundaries, and Quebec, the elder sister, is proud to celebrate with her younger and bigger sister an event which, above all, I will call Canadian. In this great seat of learning, thousands of Canadians have been trained for the struggle of life. They have been taught the lessons by which the manhood of a young nation is built, and, having become fully equipped for an active and fruitful life, have now covered the continent from ocean to ocean, making our country a competitor with the other nations of the world. In every field of human intelligence, activity and endeavor. On behalf of my province and of her great universities I extend to the University of Toronto our warmest congratulations and best wishes for continued success and achievements.

DELVES INTO PAST

"University of Toronto, you are today one hundred years old. I pray, throw a glance into the past and look at the path you have followed. You have seen Canada in its infancy: a very remote British Columbia, an unknown west, a golden wheat, a divided east struggling painfully to adjust differences which, at times, seemed to threaten our national life; altogether a young and ambitious nation, eager for liberty and constitutional rights, with unlimited natural resources only awaiting capital and energy for their development. And today, after a century—a very short period in the life of the world—you witness our people blossoming into full maturity and proudly taking their place in the council of nations. You have therefore been connected, from decade to decade, with the growth and achievements. Many of the men who were instrumental in our success were your sons. As a Canadian I am grateful to you. May you live many more centuries and reap still richer harvest.

"I have been asked to deliver a short address on 'Aspects of Canadian History Since Confederation.' The subject is a difficult one for a modern Canadian, rather addicted to active politics and whose view of the past is shared by many of his neighbors nor by quite a few of his own household. Moreover, our Premier, the Honorable Mr. Bennett, will tomorrow dwell on the same subject and, as usual, have the last word.

"I feel also that having to deal with so many facts of our history, I shall be brought to speak of events in which many of you have had part, of wonderful achievements of which you have been witnesses. Is it not calling for my appreciation of questions which are still live issues in the building up of our country and on which your opinions are widely divided? It is a ground which I may well fear to tread.

"But, having accepted the task allotted to me, I will endeavor to form it in such a way, I hope, as to be permitted to return home a free man. Canada, after all, has a very short past, and it is in her great future that our interest lies.

AIMS OF CONFEDERATION

"The great future must be studied in the light of the past. May I therefore be allowed to find out what were the aims and objectives of the Fathers of our Canadian Confederation had in view when they discussed and framed the British North America Act. Did these men read correctly in a dim and rather uncertain future? Had they the foresight to anticipate coming events and guard against possible dangers and rocks on which the ship of the young Dominion could get wrecked?

"We all know that the Union had lived its time. The Canadian colonies were hopelessly divided. Internal strife and external competition and animosities stopped all progress. I need not recall the particulars of those momentous days when the future of Canada was at stake.

"It has been said that every nation, in moments of danger, produces men capable of coping with those perils. Canada was true to this rule and gave birth to statesmen whose patriotism, energy and foresight created our great Dominion of which we are so proud.

"What was their aspiration? On what purpose were they bent?

"Speaking for Canada, Sir John Macdonald expressed the aim he had in view as follows: 'A federation of all the provinces as would tend very materially to enhance the individual and collective prosperity, and also give them in their united manhood, that national prowess and strength which would make them at least the fourth nation on the face of the globe.'

"In the name of Lower Canada, Sir George Etienne Cartier was just as precise: 'A grand confederation such as must produce benefit to all and injurious to none, concentrating and combining the national fragments and resources of all the provinces. In order that they, in their trade, intelligence, and national power and prosperity, might be rated as at least the fourth nation of the world.'

SIR CHARLES TUPPER

"The Nova Scotia representative, Sir Charles Tupper, had the same conception: 'A measure calculated to unite the energies and elevate the status of the North American provinces, cement together by every tie that can add to their greatness, consolidate their influence, advance their interests, and continue their fealty to their Mother Country.'

"John Hamilton Gray, of New Brunswick, wished to remove every barrier to their advancement, and uniting their talent and influence for the maintenance and advancement of their common interests, prosperity and happiness."

GLIMPSES OF FUTURE

"With your kind permission I will touch another aspect which is not past, but future Canadian history. 'In what direction are we moving?' 'I wish I could raise the veil which hides the future. Four courses seem open to Canada: Annexation to the United States; independence; the breaking up of Confederation; or the status quo, that is standing upon our allegiance to the Crown of Great Britain.

"Let me say at once that personally and speaking as I believe, for the great majority of my province, I unhesitatingly choose the last course.

"But, it is not the act or the thought of a bad Canadian to look into the future and try to ascertain the trend of events.

"One of the objects of Confederation was the continuance of our connection with the Mother Country and preventing our drifting into annexation. No one could ever question the absolute devotion to Great Britain of the Fathers of Confederation. To show, however, to what extent they followed the logic of facts and how broad their outlook was, it must be said that they saw ahead as far as the 'turning of the road.'

"It was only natural that they should attempt to raise the veil which hid the mystery of the future. Such is the rational course. Who would dare challenge the fealty of these men because they scrutinized the future and wondered whether the stature of Canada would not some day force her out of tutelage? To quote an English historical writer: 'No man can be in a less revolutionary frame of mind than he who foresees an event without having the slightest interest in hastening its arrival.'

"Have the views and hopes of the Fathers of Confederation been realized? Macdonald said: 'Immigrants will have to make a new home in what is known to them as a great country than in any other little colony. When, by means of this rapid increase, the population of eight or nine millions of inhabitants our alliance will be worthy of being sought by the great nations of the world.'

"George Brown knew almost as much of the future: 'Some among us,' he said, 'may live to see the day when the British Empire, a great and powerful people may have grown up in these lands, when the boundless forest all around us shall have given place to smiling fields and thriving towns, and when the united Government, under the British flag, shall extend from shore to shore.'

"I may be an optimist; however, I prefer such a role to that of a pessimist; but have not these prophecies proved true beyond the most sanguine expectations of the men of 1867?

"We are today one of the great trading nations of the world. Smiling fields extend from ocean to ocean, our population has trebled, immigrants flock to our shores and find here happy and comfortable homes, our mining and forest development makes of Canada one of the leaders in production, three transcontinental railways cross our immense country, and the great West, we raised more men than were gathered in the grand armies of Napoleon. Canadian ships carry trade and commerce to the remotest places on the globe. Great universities and colleges have sprung up in a former wilderness, and Canada today has sent her own men to the Council of Nations.

BELIEVES IN UNION

"With due respect to those who may think otherwise, I am a firm believer in the Canadian Confederation. The world of 1867 was great, their statesmanship unerring, their vision clear and true. Confederation must and will live.

"Being a human creature, it may have some defects, perhaps not in its principles, but in their application.

"Every Canadian must understand that, sixty years ago, we formed not a homogeneous country, but a confederation of different provinces for certain purposes, with the distinct understanding that each of these provinces should retain certain qualities which a people, like an individual, has no right to surrender. There are some moral suicides which are as repugnant to the soul of a collectively as to that of any human being. Traditions, customs, laws, national aspirations, language are heritages which were abandoned by none of the contracting parties to the confederation pact, and which, to some extent, were put in common only for their safeguard and protection.

"Have the aims and desires of the Fathers of Confederation been fully realized in this respect?

"Perhaps not always, but I do not wish to enter into this controversy, except to affirm that to live and endure the spirit as well as the letter of the pact of Confederation must be respected.

"May I be permitted to pause here a moment and say that if the latest development in the Ontario school controversies gives satisfaction, as I hope it will to a minority which thought itself aggrieved and received much sympathy from the sister provinces, a great stride towards Canadian unity and good feeling will have been accomplished, and much credit is due to the men, in all camps, who have made it possible.

"I believe that, a hundred years hence, when the University of Toronto will be celebrating its second centenary, the then Premier of Quebec, who will undoubtedly be invited to read an address on 'Aspects of Canadian History Since Confederation,' will say that such a settlement of a difficult question was a turning point in Canadian annals, that it was cheerfully accepted by the people of Ontario, that this good example was followed elsewhere, and that once more British fair play was true to its noble traditions.

"I wish I could raise the veil which hides the future. Four courses seem open to Canada: Annexation to the United States; independence; the breaking up of Confederation; or the status quo, that is standing upon our allegiance to the Crown of Great Britain.

"Let me say at once that personally and speaking as I believe, for the great majority of my province, I unhesitatingly choose the last course.

"But, it is not the act or the thought of a bad Canadian to look into the future and try to ascertain the trend of events.

To quote an English historical writer: 'No man can be in a less revolutionary frame of mind than he who foresees an event without having the slightest interest in hastening its arrival.'

Canadian ships carry trade and commerce to the remotest places on the globe. Great universities and colleges have sprung up in a former wilderness, and Canada today has sent her own men to the Council of Nations.

"I am, however, a firm believer in the Canadian Confederation, provided we stand on an equal footing with the Empire as a whole, that we be masters in our own homes, subjects of the king and not colonies or provinces, as a London paper called us recently when we welcomed His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales. Unless present conditions are changed can we expect a better fate than to be the free men we are, masters of our destinies and forming part, as full partners, of the mightiest empire of the world? A partnership in the British dominions, under one king, with local autonomy in all domains, with facilities for trade and commerce, unity of bonds of friendship and mutual support, willingly entered into, is my ideal of the connection with the Mother Country which I earnestly believe should exist. 'Civis Romanus sum' was the proud boast of every Roman citizen of old Rome, wherever he was in the empire. 'I am a British subject' has been a proud meaning for all those wherever they are, who are subjects of the King.

"The great majority of my province are French French by blood, by tradition, by culture, by language. At all cost, they will retain this heritage which is as dear to them as their own British heritage is to you, and perhaps you become weary and tired to fight for it. But, provided this great asset is safeguarded, I know of no better British subjects, and their fealty to the Crown is the greatest tribute that can be paid to British institutions.

"But, I must not forget the question I had in mind, and which calls for an answer: the trend of events for the past sixty years, point to another regime or to a fundamental change in our Constitution? Without hesitation, I say: No.

"If you turn page after page of Canadian history for this past half century, where do you find a serious movement towards independence, annexation to the southern neighbor or the breaking up of the federal tie? Public opinion must prepare such changes, and public opinion will only be moved by important events, depression in trade and industry, national ill-feelings.

BRITISH TIE IMPORTANT

"I am, however, a firm believer in the Canadian Confederation, provided we stand on an equal footing with the Empire as a whole, that we be masters in our own homes, subjects of the king and not colonies or provinces, as a London paper called us recently when we welcomed His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales. Unless present conditions are changed can we expect a better fate than to be the free men we are, masters of our destinies and forming part, as full partners, of the mightiest empire of the world? A partnership in the British dominions, under one king, with local autonomy in all domains, with facilities for trade and commerce, unity of bonds of friendship and mutual support, willingly entered into, is my ideal of the connection with the Mother Country which I earnestly believe should exist. 'Civis Romanus sum' was the proud boast of every Roman citizen of old Rome, wherever he was in the empire. 'I am a British subject' has been a proud meaning for all those wherever they are, who are subjects of the King.

"The great majority of my province are French French by blood, by tradition, by culture, by language. At all cost, they will retain this heritage which is as dear to them as their own British heritage is to you, and perhaps you become weary and tired to fight for it. But, provided this great asset is safeguarded, I know of no better British subjects, and their fealty to the Crown is the greatest tribute that can be paid to British institutions.

"But, I must not forget the question I had in mind, and which calls for an answer: the trend of events for the past sixty years, point to another regime or to a fundamental change in our Constitution? Without hesitation, I say: No.

"If you turn page after page of Canadian history for this past half century, where do you find a serious movement towards independence, annexation to the southern neighbor or the breaking up of the federal tie? Public opinion must prepare such changes, and public opinion will only be moved by important events, depression in trade and industry, national ill-feelings.

INTERNAL DISSENSIONS

Where are all these elements of dissolution to be found? "On the contrary, is not Canada more prosperous than ever, more confident and hopeful than in the days of 1867? Is she not firmer in her national unity, stronger in the human feeling that exists from ocean to ocean in the souls of her children? Let well alone, is a golden rule for nations as well as for individuals.

"I therefore think that the whole trend of historical events points out that Canada is not drifting into the unknown, but, satisfied with her present situation, wishes to adhere to the constitution of 1867.

ANNEXATION UNLIKELY

"Annexation to the United States? No one will deny the immense wealth of our southern neighbors, their wonderful spirit of enterprise, the part they play today in the councils of the world, the possibilities of a country which combines all climates, all natural resources, the energy, self-confidence and self-reliance of youth and manhood. But Canadian spirit and Canadian pride are stronger than this lure.

"Not many months ago I was discussing this topic with a very prominent American. He concluded, however, by saying: 'Even if you want to come with us, we do not want you. British supremacy has been unable to absorb French Canada, therefore we could not, and as we do not want a French state in our own states, please stay as you are.' Strange irony of fate: French Canada being the stumbling-block which annexation meets its fate! It is a tribute to my race which I am proud to offer to an Ontario audience.

"Let us, therefore, continue to live what I hope may be a life partnership, of which the University of Toronto saw the birth sixty years ago, and may such a life remain a happy and prosperous one.

"But, if Canada needs unity and harmony, there is one field in which I invite competition, and I wish it to be keen and active: it is in the domain of education. Although Canada is only sparsely populated, we have many great universities and seats of learning. Let them be competitors, let them strive and struggle, to produce men who will be a credit to science, to mankind and to Canada. True, a Bantling is not an everyday product, but we need more men of his type and calibre to advance science and throw lustre on our young country. It is for the universities to educate and to offer them to Canada. An amalgamation of all universities is an impossibility, but co-operation between all, co-ordination of research work, perhaps specialization in fields by one or more of the universities would, I believe, bring great results.

"I must conclude, otherwise I shall be charged with encroaching too much on the second century of your university life.

"From my province I bring you a message of good-will and friendship. Ontario and Quebec are the two big provinces of Canada. They have problems that are common to both, and these must be approached and solved in a true Canadian spirit. We wish no sectionalism and are not hostile to any part of Canada, but we believe that a complete understanding between the two leading provinces, after this long period of all causes of friction, will lead to a better, greater and more united Canada."

Ottawa Paper Publishers Rumor That Canadian International May Purchase

OTTAWA, Oct. 13.—The Ottawa Citizen, in a news page story, states that Hon. R. B. Bennett, majority shareholder in the E. B. Eddy Co., of Hull, is on his way to New York for the purpose of meeting A. R. Graun-tin, president of the International Paper Company and its directors, which owns and controls the Gatineau power projects on the Gatineau River here, and the Gatineau mill of the International Paper Company at West Templeton, Quebec.

The paper adds: "It is anticipated that industrial and financial circles that there shortly will be forthcoming an announcement from New York in support of the rumor which has been persistent for over a year that the Canadian International Paper Company has, or will, shortly purchase outright, or secure a controlling interest in the big paper concern at the Chaudiere, the Eddy Company." After referring to past denials made by officers of the companies concerned regarding the possibility of such a deal, the Citizen says: "It is stated, however, there now a strong possibility of the big deal taking place, in view of the public announcement by Hon. R. B.
Bennett, that with his election as Opposition leader, he would retire from active participation in his many business interests."

NO CHANCE OF FAILURE FOR TEXTILE MILL

Inducements offered when he was invited to investigate the proposal with a location in Victoria, namely, a site, and exaction and water privilege for a term of years. He understood that a by-law would be submitted including the terms for the endorsement of the electorate.

Turning to the available market,
Mr. Moore questioned the official report on trade and commerce, dated to end with the fiscal year
March 31, 1927, that the importation of woolen yarns into the Dominion in the period was 3,183,975 pounds, valued at $3,614,888, this quantity being used exclusively for manufacture. The importation of worsted yarns was 1,183,975 pounds, valued at $1,183,975.

In view of the fact that this plant would use a minimum of 150,000 pounds weight, with a capacity production of 250,000 to 300,000 pounds, it would be easily appreciated that it would be a small thing in comparison with the aggregate demand of the Canadian mills. In manufactured lengths of worsted and serges Canada, in the twelve months, imported 10,797,625 yards, valued at $14,140,784. This material was used chiefly in the manufacture of clothing.

TESTS OF MATERIAL
Since he came here first he had made a careful scrutiny of potential demand for material, and on Wednesday, in Vancouver, he spent the day at the mills of Gordon-Campbell, Limited, where worsted yarn shipped from his mill, and had found it particularly useful for the production of hosiery and sweaters.

He produced pairs of socks made at the Campbell plant to the Colonist representative to show that the grade of product had been manufactured in British Columbia from yarn spun in the very plant which he proposed to ship to Victoria.

ON GENERAL POLICIES
Mr. Moore asked the press representative to stress the fact that he was not a promoter, but one who had come out to study the situation by invitation, "I am not attempting to force anything on the people of Victoria," he said. "But I see the opportunity, and it is for the people of Victoria to decide. What I do say is that I offer an industry which is one of the cleanest, most congenial and least objectionable to the public. If the scheme failed of approval, he continued, he would develop his business in Bradford, where he had an established connection, but it would be impossible to take the matter up in the city where he would have to enter contracts which would prevent his moving his plant hereafter."

Mr. Moore, who is well known in the textile trade, both in England and in India, expects to remain here until the terms of the agreement with the city council, in formal form in the shape of a by-law for the approval of the electorate.

Explosion Kills Three
SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 13.—Three men were dead today and one was dying as the result of a mysterious explosion in the locker room of a San Francisco motor car agency.
The dead are Thomas Bullard, Norman Nordqvist and Roy Cummings.
Frank Alteri, the survivor, is not expected to live.

Charlie was thirty for knowledge and was always collecting interesting facts. "I read today," he said to Michael, "of the wonderful progress made in aviation. Men can do anything—absolutely anything a bird can do."

But Michael was tired of wonders.
he was more matter-of-fact. "Is that so," he answered. "Well, when you see an airman fast asleep, hanging on to a branch of a tree with one foot, I'll come and have a look!"

new wing to St. Joseph's Hospital closed Wednesday, and word is now being awaited from Montreal as to whether the contract has been awarded. This new wing will cost approximately $300,000.

Police Dance—The bi-monthly dance of the city police force will be held tonight at headquarters hall, Flagstaff Street, from 8.30 to 11.30 o'clock. A four-piece orchestra will be in attendance and refreshments will be served.

Celebration—The grand opening anniversary celebration of the Shonye Benevolent Association will be held on Friday from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. at 1223 Government Street and Theatre. A cordial invitation is extended to the public.

British Israel Federation—The Victoria branch for being drunk in the Victoria Hotel held its annual business meeting on Monday evening. The business and financial affairs of the association were found to be in a very satisfactory condition. The following officers for the ensuing year were elected: Mr. W.
H. Jennings, president; Mr. R. B.
Richardson, first vice-president; other vice-presidents, Messrs. R. B. Price and W. H. Jennings. Mr. T. Parsons was re-elected secretary-treasurer.

Saatchi Court—Duan, a Hindu, was fined $25 in the Saatchi police court yesterday for driving in a public place. Ralo, another Hindu, was fined $25 for the same offence. Wesley Modeste, of Duncan Street, was fined $25 for driving in a public place. The common danger along the Gorge Road. Sue Kin, of 2122 Douglas Street, was fined $5 for failing to produce a driver's licence.
Arthur Phillips of Leachtown, charged under the Wife's Maintenance Act, was remanded until next Thursday.

Prices Important—The price the Russian Government officials are prepared to pay will govern the interior ranchers of the province in their decision whether to hold an other round-up of horses this fall, according to officials of the Department of Agriculture, following a conference between Mr. Louis Koon, Soviet representative, and Hon. E.
D. Barrow, Minister of Agriculture.
The Russian representatives are seeking 400 head of horses and it would be necessary for the ranchers to round up about 1,000 animals for the selection to be made.

PRESIDENT PRAISES
INDUSTRIAL PEACE

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Oct. 13.—The industrial "peace" of today, which a "short time ago would have seemed impossible," received the attention of President Coolidge in a speech here today at the annual observance of "Pounders' Day" at Carnegie Institute.

"It has brought a great harvest of contentment," he said, "and a peace of mind which is the basis of prosperity. In its light the relation between employer and employee has been so greatly improved that much of the old friction no longer exists."

Groom—"What's the matter,
dear?"
Bride—"I can't understand why Uncle John didn't send a wedding present! He always, without fail, sent one before!"

Young Patsy: "Bogorra, and it's mesself will have to do the sum all over again."
(The general election in the Irish Free State having, for practical purposes, proved a stalemate, another appeal to the country is one of the possibilities of the near future.)

LATEST SIAMSE TWINS DIE

don suburb, died in their sleep in hospital within a few minutes of was considered to separate them, but it was abandoned as being too risky.

HISTORICAL NAME GIVEN NEW LINER

Bibby Vessel Named 'Cheshire' Will Make Maiden Sailing in Short Time

The selection of the name Cheshire for the new Bibby liner, which is scheduled to take her maiden sailing in a short time, will receive many memories of the original bearer of that name, says The Journal of Commerce.

She was one of the most successful ships that Messrs Harland & Wolff ever turned out for the Bibby Line, and it must be remembered that in other days the relations between the two firms were so close that a Harland berth was invariably known as the "Bibby Slip."

With her sister, the Shropshire, whose name is also perpetuated in the new programme, she was built in 1891, a twin-screw ship of nearly 6,000 tons, which in those days was regarded as big for the Indian Ocean.

Her appearance was typically Harland & Wolff, a hull with yacht lines, a single tall funnel and four masts. Although designed for only fourteen knots, she made fifteen on trial without the least effort, and could have made an extra half knot had been pressed. Her reliability and regular running were eminently satisfactory to her owners and passengers, but they led to such frequent appearances in the press that she was little known outside the shipping world.

Towards the end of 1909, when the Belfast ships were already under way, she was sold, with the provision that she should not be delivered for twelve months, and accordingly it was not until October, 1910, that a native in Rangoon, Roister, his house flag in her and rechristened her Seang Choon.

Slight alterations in her construction for the purpose of carrying a large number of native passengers brought her tonnage up slightly, and she ran satisfactorily to the Far East until September, 1914, when she was taken up as a transport to carry the Indian Expeditionary Force.

As soon as she was released she was put on the Australian trooping run, remaining there until she was converted into a hospital ship. She performed this duty for a year and was then employed carrying troops to the West African campaign and bringing native labor back.

It was while on this duty that she encountered a German submarine off the coast in July, 1917, and was torpedoed without warning, nineteen lives being lost.

SHIP RADIOS:
FLIERS SAFE, PLANE LOST

The first news of the landing and rescue arrived here at 4 p.m., in a radio message Miss Elder sent to the Paris office of the Associated Press.

BELIEVED LOST
Most of Paris and almost all of provincial France, however, went to bed tonight thinking the aviator and his pilot lost, since it was not announced by officials until after 6 p.m. that they were safe.

About that time Commandant
Renouville, of Le Bourget Flying Field, received a message from Miss Elder. The last editions of all the Paris afternoon newspapers were on the streets at that time with their headlines reading the same as they had during the day:

"No news of the American Girl."
Even the first edition of tomorrow's Petit Parisien and Le Matin carried the headlines: "Lost at sea," and "No news of American Girl since Tuesday evening."

After dinner, when most good Parisians were home, some papers put out special editions sold to late strollers and partakers of refreshments along the boulevards began to get the news.

Expressions of relief were then heard everywhere and at the same time comment was almost universal.
"She was mighty lucky to land by steamship she was rescued!"

LAKEVIEW, Fla., Oct. 13.—The home town of Ruth Elder and George Haldeman outdid itself today in wild jubilee over news that the transatlantic flyers had been picked up at sea.

SWIMMING BURGLAR CAUGHT
While directing his flashlight casually over the canal at Leeds, England, a policeman was amazed to see a nude man climbing a stack of pipes on a building. The man threw himself into the canal and attempted to escape by swimming, but when he landed near the spot where he had left his clothes he found the policeman awaiting him.
He said he had decided to become a burglar to aid his sick wife.

City Hall Activities in Brief

LAND COMMITTEE
Alderman E. S. Woodward announced yesterday that a meeting of the land committee would be held this afternoon and that he would refuse to attend the meeting if it was held in the office of the City Land Commissioner. He refused to attend the meeting and any others that might be held in this office, on the grounds that it was not a room to work in or hold meetings in because of bad odors from the drain pipes. It is expected that he will recommend that the land office be removed to some other part of the City Hall.

OLDEST DELEGATE Probably the oldest delegate to the Western Mayors' Convention, which will be held in this city on October 20, will be Reeve John Newell Evans, aged eighty-one years, and chief magistrate of the oldest rural municipality in British Columbia, Mr. John Baxter, Mayor's secretary, announced yesterday.

Reeve Evans was born in Montgomeryshire, North Wales, and came to British Columbia in 1884.
He moved to the Cowichan district in 1870. He has held office as reeve of North Cowichan, for the last five years. He was a school trustee for twenty-three years and also acted as alderman. From 1903 to 1906 he was a member of the Provincial Legislature for Cowichan riding.

COUNCIL MEETING
A meeting of the City Council will be held at 5 o'clock this evening to discuss the recommendation of the water committee to have a preliminary survey of the Sooke Lake watershed made. Should the council adopt some policy in connection with this matter it is believed that Alderman Woodward will reconsider his decision to resign from the chairmanship of the water committee.

BOARD OF APPEAL
The Board of Appeal on the zoning by-law will convene in the Council Chamber at 4.30 o'clock this afternoon. Six appeals against the by-law will be considered. The applications have been in for some time and visits have been made by members of the board to the various properties in question.

GRAIN ELEVATOR
Members of the industrial committee and officials of the Panama Pacific Grain Terminals, Limited, met yesterday afternoon to discuss the removal of a building on the elevator by-law, and as a result of the meeting a telegram has been sent east, advising officials there that all that is necessary to comply with the by-law is to start construction before the plans are completely revised by C. D. Howe & Company. The work suggested is the removing of a building on the Ogden Point Docks which covers the site for the elevator. Work on demolishing the building would constitute a start on the construction of the elevator.

OUTSIDE EMPLOYEES
At a meeting of the outside staff of the City Hall, held Wednesday night to discuss superannuation, it was decided to take no action until City Solicitor H. S. Pringle had drafted the by-law for the pension committee. The situation remains as it was before. That is, the outside staff has withdrawn its petition, or in other words, has not made application for superannuation.

by the Premier, it was stated in

AUTHOR SPEAKS TO LOCAL CLUB

Mr. John Regan Addresses Authors' Association, Also Mr. Walter McKaye

Addresses by two successful men of letters, Mr. John Regan, author of "Valiant Heart," one of the year's leading Canadian books, and Mr. Walter McKaye, who has spoken to Victoria audiences several times during the past week, gave unusual interest to the meeting of the Victoria branch of the Canadian Authors' Association last evening in the Pemberton Building. Mr. Donald Fraser, who presided, introduced each of the speakers, and supplemented Mr. Regan's modest description of how he wrote his story, by reading two chapters from the book. These proved to have arresting interest, and so gripped the imagination of some of the audience that when Mr. Fraser began to tell the sequel he had been requested not to spoil the pleasure of would-be readers.

Mr. Regan's description of his experiences as an author was brief, and included incidents of the rejected manuscript, "Valiant Heart" had belonged to that class, but finally found acceptance by Hutchinson's after it had been turned down by a Canadian publisher. The author did not consider it a typical Canadian story in that it did not have a background of bunting bronchos, although the scene was an actual Canadian ranch, in Saskatchewan. The two chapters read by Mr. Fraser indicated a powerful capacity in psychological analysis of men and women, the characters in the scenes described being a white man and his Indian wife.

Mr. McKaye opened his short address with congratulations to Mr. Regan on being able to write of the soil of Canada in such a gripping way, without, as some writers made the mistake of doing, idealizing or changing the conditions. It was a great pleasure to find the work of Canadian authors increasing, both in quantity and appreciation by the Canadian reader.

Some reminiscences of his own interesting associations with such well-known Canadian writers as Pauline Johnson, Archibald Lampman, Wilfred Campbell, were given. It was recalled that Dr. Drummond, author of the now universally-read "habitant" poems, had met with failure when he first tried to publish in Canada, finally having gone to New York. The sale of Drummond's poems in Canada and the United States now ran into many thousands. Robert Service, too, had tried all the Canadian publishers in vain when he first began to write, eventually the Ryerson Press bringing out his verse.

"Our Canadian publishers are not always good guessers," commented Mr. McKaye. Pauline Johnson had received just $2 for her best-known poem, "The Song My Paddle Sings," and today her collected poems had run to a seventeenth edition, and 130,000 of her "Legends of Vancouver" had been sold. During the past year, the Women's Canadian Club had never honored her, but after her death they had erected a monument to her memory. Canada was long on eulaphy and short on laity," some of Marjorie Pickthart's verse was recited.

Sunday Evening Socials Arranged

SIDNEY, Oct. 13.—On Sunday next Rev. W. M. Lees is inaugurating a series of "Pleasant Sunday Evenings" at the Sidney United Church. These are to take place during the half hour before the regular Sunday evening service, and will commence at 7 o'clock. From time to time the programme will be varied, and will consist of instrumental and vocal music, and eulogy, illustrated lantern talks, etc., with a short inspirational talk by the pastor for the younger members of the congregation. Next Sunday Miss Hambley will render organ music, Miss K. Watts a solo, and there will be a sing-song for the audience. Rev. Mr. Lees will tell the record of the cripple who became a giant mind. The regular service will commence at 7 p.m.

"I want ambitious men in my establishment," remarked a business man the other day. "The employee who sees nothing ahead of him is apt to find something unpleasant close behind him."

Give your Child a Grip on HEALTH

Buy shoes that are built by men who have spent almost a quarter of a century in the study of scientific shoe designing. These men have created a shoe that protects the health of your child—

No wrinkled linings to create callouses; no tacks, but a cushion-sole that increases the natural springiness of the foot—a shoe that can be enlarged a full size when it is outgrown. We sell and recommend them.

The Mirror of the Mode

By MARY MARSHALL

BUYING clothes ready made is the best plan for many women, and I think most of us, when we think of it, are very glad that we live in an age when really good-looking, ready-made clothes are to be had in abundance almost everywhere. Few of us would willingly go back to the old custom of worrying along with a dressmaker in the house two or three weeks every Spring and Autumn—and few of us could afford to go to a dressmaking establishment where clothes might be satisfactorily made for us outside our own home.

The great advantage of the ready-made dress is that you can see it before you buy it—and you can get it when you want it.

Still the custom of buying clothes ready made has induced many women to neglect the gentle art of home dress-making entirely—and with it the trick of making over last season's clothes. I am convinced, ought still to play an important role in the wardrobe of all women in moderate circumstances.

Made-over frocks, like entrees made from left-over meats are frequently most attractive—better sometimes than the originals.

So for the sake of dressing your best for what you have to spend, let me beg of you to develop your skill as an amateur dressmaker to the extent of making over some at least of your old clothes. And just because after you have ripped up and cleaned the material of an old frock you don't find enough to make into something new, don't be discouraged. Many of the smartest of the new frocks are made with two materials of different colors or shades. The chances are that you cannot match the old material perfectly, so don't try to match it at all. Get material of an entirely different color or tone and make a compose frock. Recently I saw a little frock that quite took my eye. It is sketched for you today.

It occurred to me that this would furnish an excellent model for a frock made from material salvaged from last season's wardrobe. Too often the home dressmaker tries to make the old material do by skimping or by covering up awkward plying by perfectly pointless trimming. Better make a virtue of necessity, it seems to me, and make a virtue of necessity by piecing the old material with the new by means of an ornamental faggotting stitch.

If you are interested in this problem of making over your old frocks, send me a stamped, self-addressed envelope and I will send you a diagram of the faggotting with directions for making.

AUTONOMY OF LIFE EVIDENT

Creators of Biological Sphere Show Laws of Their Own, Says Lecturer

MONTREAL, Oct. 12.—Nothing happens in living creatures that is inconsistent with the laws of chemistry and physics, but new things happen. This is the autonomy of life. Mind cannot be built up of any of the materials which mind has furnished or mirrored. In this fact, Professor J. Arthur Thomson, LL.D., indicated the autonomy of mind, in a lecture, "The Autonomy of Life and Mind," given last evening at the Diocesan Theological College as the second of a series of lectures on religion and science. In symbolic picture language, Professor Thomson explained to his audience the swaying boundaries of the three great orders of the universe, the cosmophere, the domain of things, the biosphere, the realm of organisms, and the sociosphere, the kingdom of man.

SPHERE OF THINGS

Speaking first of the sphere of things, the lecturer called up before the imagination of his hearers the wide range of the cosmophere, which includes the land and sea, far-off nebulae and minute atoms, dew drops and precious stones, and the "thousand things" of the living creatures in which are found elephants and germs of malaria, seaweed and the cedars of Lebanon. Man, as distinguished by the mental aspect, is the third class. While the independence of life beyond physical or chemical laws was the theme of the discourse, yet Professor Thomson warned against drawing the dividing line between the classes so harshly as to jettison the continuity of evolution, and to vestige of scientific truth in the poet's line, "Thou canst not stir a flower without troubling a star." When coral polyps build a star, they are building a world.

Professor Thomson's lecture was a masterpiece of the group of living creatures in which are found elephants and germs of malaria, seaweed and the cedars of Lebanon. Man, as distinguished by the mental aspect, is the third class. While the independence of life beyond physical or chemical laws was the theme of the discourse, yet Professor Thomson warned against drawing the dividing line between the classes so harshly as to jettison the continuity of evolution, and to vestige of scientific truth in the poet's line, "Thou canst not stir a flower without troubling a star." When coral polyps build a star, they are building a world.

In spite of all that can be given in chemical and physical terms, it is impossible to give a complete account of vital phenomena, and Professor Thomson, still less of behavior, development, and evolution. That the swallow which leaves a nest in England to migrate to Africa, and a year later returns to the same hedge the next Spring, indicates a power of registering a past experience which is an irreducible factor. Even a beetle is greater than a star because it can steer its own course. The starfish, which has not a single nerve centre, can learn to right itself when placed on its back, while a magnificent river depends on the bed through which it flows. In their purposiveness, in the complex interest capacity of enregistering the past, the creatures of the biological sphere show laws of their own which justify the word autonomy.

MEASURE OF MIND

In coming to the highest division, Professor Thomson discussed in language that laymen might understand, the argument that man and mind have no intrinsic likeness, and give no fresh aspect of reality not seen in the other spheres. Mind, he admitted, is logically only a postulate, for while natural science deals with the measurable, one cannot measure the measure of mind. No verbal jugglery can get the inner life of life from the stream of metabolism. While there is no scientific way in which one can state that the behavior of an animal in a particular case is not good sense if "mind" is left out. The perceptual purpose, the training of the young, the conventions of animal life, bear out this contention. One may explain his dog in terms of electrons and protons, but that does not help him to understand his dog, was the illustration by which Professor Thomson summed up this fact for his audience.

In answer to the claim that man is an adaptive mechanism which has among its functions the fabrication of thought, the lecturer made the striking statement, "But a machine cannot have a theory that it is a machine." Admitting that we do not know the relation of mind and body, Professor Thomson yet stated firmly that the physical element may influence but does not determine man's personality. But the autonomy of mind is man's birthright, and that the science of the future is as likely to read back into the cosmophere the lessons of the biosphere as to proceed in the opposite direction. However the course might be said Professor Thomson, it is inevitable that science should lead men to think in a big way of life—unless there is something wrong with science.

Dr. R. E. Welsh presided over the lecture, and Dr. D. L. Ritchie delivered the opening prayers. In his remarks Dr. Welsh expressed the delight of himself and his colleagues in the distinction being conferred on Professor Thomson in the honor of degrees which he receives from McGill today.

WETS AND DRY LINE UP IN U.S.

Modification of Volstead Act Before Next Congress Is Not Likely

WASHINGTON, D.C., Oct. 13.—Wets and drys are lining up their forces for a resumption of their annual warfare in Congress. Neither side made any material progress in the way of legislation at the last session, but the drys are hopeful of getting through some of the administration proposals in the old Goff Bill for tightening up the Volstead Act.

Conceding that the drys have a preponderance of the votes in both the House and Senate, the wets say there is no parliamentary method by which they can delay a decision, as the first session of the new Congress will continue for five or six months, probably just before the Republican national convention next June.

However, proponents of additional dry legislation incline to the view that with a presidential campaign in the offing the party leaders will not look with any great favor on enactment of more stringent provisions to a law which the wets now charge is impossible of enforcement.

While the prohibition issue is a non-partisan one so far as Congress itself is concerned, it is in national politics, more so at present than perhaps ever before, and party leaders see little prospect of its being removed in advance of the 1928 presidential election unless it should be that both of the major parties nominated candidates pronouncedly dry.

WANT RIGHT OF SEARCH
Just what provisions of the Goff Act will be selected by the drys as their battle points in the new Congress remains to be determined, but during the last session emphasis was placed upon those proposals for revocation of liquor permits, for search of dwellings suspected of having been converted into commercial distilling places, and for stricter regulation of breweries.

Whatever bill is introduced on behalf of the drys will have to go through the usual process of committee consideration, with public or private hearings. Since the Goff Bill was favorably reported by the Senate Judiciary Committee there has been a complete change in high prohibition enforcement officials and naturally the view of the wets on the bill would be sought by Congressional committees before legislation was reported to either House.

At any hearings held, the Anti-Saloon League will be represented by F. Scott McBride, the new legislative superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League, selected temporarily, at least, to carry on the work which the late Wayne B. Wheeler looked after for many years, both in committee and the halls of Congress.

PLANS NOT MATURE
While the wets have not yet formulated their full programme, it is certain that they will come forward again with amendments to the Volstead Act, leaving to the courts which is in fact intoxicating beverage, thus removing the one-half of one per cent restriction of the law. In other words, they would extend to all beverages the provision governing cider and fruit juices.

Another proposal of the wets is that removing the restriction on the amount of spirits a physician may prescribe for patients. This measure is in line with one endorsed by the American Medical Association.

Whether the wets will press for a national referendum on the questions of repealing the Eighteenth Amendment and modifying the Volstead Act has not yet been determined. But neither these nor any of the other wet proposals have any chance of getting anywhere in the next Congress, which is overwhelmingly dry.

CANADIAN LEGION MEETS AT SIDNEY

Membership Roll Continues to Grow—Arrange to Celebrate Armistice Day

SIDNEY, Oct. 13.—The regular monthly meeting of the North Saanich Branch of the Canadian Legion, B.E.S.L., was held in the clubrooms, Mainway Hall, on Tuesday evening. The president, Com. Alan Calvert, occupied the chair, and there were a large number of members present.

Applications were received from three comrades for membership, and they were elected unanimously. The membership of the branch is now nearing the one hundred mark. The minutes of the District Council were brought before the meeting, and the resolution in the holding of a complimentary dinner to Gen. Sir Percy Lake, national president, was unanimously endorsed.

A letter from Lieut. Col. F. A. Robertson, British Columbia representative of the Dominion command, was listened to with much interest. The secretary reported having ordered a shipment of poppies and wreaths for Armistice Day, and Comrades Styan, Gray, H. Woods, and the president, and J. Climan, were appointed a committee to attend to the distribution.

After some discussion it was decided to hold the annual dance on any day of the week of November 7, excepting Armistice Day, the date, which will be announced later, to be decided upon by the committee.

Sidney Guides and Brownies Addressed By Commissioners

SIDNEY, Oct. 13.—A meeting of the Guides and Brownies Packs was held in Berwick Hall for the purpose of forming an association. There was a large attendance of parents and interested friends, who expressed their appreciation of the work and training of the local groups. Miss

Mara and Miss Leighton, commissioners of Victoria, gave interesting addresses on "Guide and Brownie Work and Duties," which was much appreciated by those present. The work and duties were well explained, and it was pointed out that an association would be of great benefit to the local Guides and troops, to which Mrs. G. K. Goddard was appointed chairman. It was decided to hold a meeting on Saturday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Lidgate, Fourth Street, to elect officers to this association, and a good attendance is hoped for. A vote of thanks was tendered to Miss Leighton and Miss Mara.

"Mama, I want a dark breakfast." "Dark breakfast? What do you mean, child?" "Why, last night you told Mary to give me a light supper and I didn't like it."

Building of railways in Manchuria is active.

Dr. Parrott's subject was, "Increasing Life's Four Dimensions," the four dimensions being named as physical, mental, moral and spiritual. There was great need to keep firm hold on the moral and spiritual in this day in order to maintain the balance and prevent youth from slipping back. It was a deplorable fact, but a fact, nevertheless, that today the average age of the criminal was about fifteen years less than it was just before the war. America was setting civilization's pace today. Christ was cited as the perfect man, and Daniel as an instance of the man of four-dimension development. The Ten Commandments still stood the test as sound law, and throughout the whole Bible ran truths which were supported by the leading scientists of this day, the old Mosaic teachings containing sound principles of hygiene and sanitation.

ANOTHER ENGLISH WOMAN CONQUERS CHANNEL

MRS. IVY GILL IS FIFTH OF SEX TO ACCOMPLISH FEAT

Twenty-Four-Year-Old Woman Masters Channel Under Trying Conditions in Fifteen Hours and Nine Minutes—Uses Trudgeon Stroke All the Way Except for Three Hours

Trains in Mill Pond at Sheffield For Great Test—Third This Month

DOVER, Eng., Oct. 13.—The third woman to swim the English Channel this month, Mrs. Ivy Gill, of Sheffield, landed at Shakespeare Beach, near here, at 12:30 a.m. today. The twenty-four-year-old girl, who is the fifth of her sex to accomplish the feat, started from Cape Gris Nez, France, at 9:11 a.m. yesterday. Mrs. Gill's time was fifteen hours and nine minutes.

Her first words on touching the English shore were: "I can't stand." She was helped up the beach by her manager and trainer and then taken to a Dover bathhouse for a hot bath.

For the first hour of her swim Mrs. Gill found the water calm, but the sea then became rough. After three hours it was calm again and conditions at the end were perfect. Mrs. Gill used a trudgeon stroke all the way, except for the three hours of rough water, when she combated the waves with a breast stroke. Mrs. Gill has won many swimming prizes in the district from which she comes. She trained for the Channel swim in the mill pond at Sheffield, where she says one stroke is as tiring as six in the sea. She works as a typist in a Sheffield office and was married recently.

Dr. Dorothy Crane Log, London "mystery swimmer," conquered the Channel this week, her time of thirteen hours and ten minutes bettering the record of fourteen hours and thirty-one minutes held by Gertrude Ederle, of New York, first woman to swim the Channel. A week previous Miss Mercedes Gietz, London, typed was credited with swimming the Channel. Mrs. Clementine Corson (Millie Gade), of New York, swam the Channel in 1926.

SWEETSER BEST DECLARES JONES

Atlanta Amateur Says Jess Is Strongest Match Player He Has Ever Met—Chick Evans Next

ST. ANDREW'S FINEST TOURNAMENT LINKS

ATLANTA, Ga., Oct. 13.—Bobby Jones thinks that Jess Sweetser is the best match play amateur golfer he has met and that Chick Evans is next.

He made this known when he spoke before the Atlanta Rotary Club in the longest speech of his career. Bobby spoke seventeen minutes and then replied to a bombardment of questions pertaining to golf.

"What course do you regard as the best test of championship golf?" he was asked.

"St. Andrews," was the answer. "What course of all you have played do you like best?"

"Oakmont." This reply was greeted by a roar of laughter, as Bobby's appearance at Oakmont, in the latest American open tournament was his most disastrous experience in that event.

BOBBY JONES

"Who is the best match play amateur golfer you ever met?"

"Jess Sweetser." It was Sweetser who gave Bobby that 8-7 drubbing at Brookline in 1922.

"Who next?"

"Chick Evans. He's a hard one to beat always; a great competitor." "Is it true that you felt you had to win the last British open because 24,000 Scotchmen were betting on you?"

Bobby laughed and his rejoinder was lost in the mingled laughter and applause from the audience.

Riots End First Games of Ruth's Barnstorm Tour

NEW YORK, Oct. 13.—Babe Ruth and Lou Gehrig have started to play two ball games on the first leg of their barnstorming tour and both have resulted in riots, with no damage done. The Bambino and Lou led a star team to a 3-1 victory over the Bushwicks yesterday at Brooklyn. Ruth getting two doubles and a single, and Gehrig a double. The contest ended just as the Bushwicks started to take their final turn at bat.

Ruth, who had played first base and taken a turn on the pitching mound, elected to sit in a box seat. A crowd of 26,000 fans, crowding the park to its capacity, swarmed to ward the home-run king. A police escort was provided and Babe got to safety, but there was no chance to resume play.

LOCAL RUGGERS LEAVE TONIGHT

Victoria U.C.T. Canadian Rugby Squad Will Meet Royals Tomorrow at New Westminster

TEAM BOLSTERED UP FOR BATTLE

The Victoria U.C.T. Canadian Rugby squad, local representatives in the Big Four League, will leave for a Western tour tonight, where they will meet the Royals tomorrow in a league fixture.

The local squad has been greatly bolstered up by the inclusion of Art Webster on the halfback line and Forbes at snap. These players are well known to the followers of the English code game and great things are expected from them. Forbes is one of the finest place kickers on Vancouver Island, and his inclusion should help compensate for the absence from the line-up of Gordie Fraser.

Dick Wilson, quarterback, will lead the British Columbia champions into battle against the men of the Royal City. Last week New Westminster went down to a twenty-five to one defeat at the hands of the Vancouver fifteen, and tomorrow Victoria fans will anxiously await the report to see what their favorites can do against a team that put up such a poor showing against the Mainlanders. The Royals are said to be greatly strengthened.

Players are requested to meet at the Y.M.C.A. at 9 o'clock tonight to have a talk on the different plays before boarding the Vancouver boat. The team is announced as follows: Forber, snap; Graham and McDonald, middles; Nichols and Henderson, outsiders; McMillan, flying wing; Dick Wilson, quarter; Stanley, Hanson and Art Webster, halves; Reserves, Oliver, Putman, Macmurchie and Hall.

Deck Tennis to Be Introduced Here Shortly

Deck tennis will be introduced to Victoria in the near future by Lieutenant Dave Pyrie of the 16th Canadian Scottish Regiment. The game, which is played with a rubber quota, is scored the same as ordinary tennis. The game is popular with passengers on deep-sea vessels, and is expected to receive a large following.

I intend to introduce the game to all the units of the Militia," Lieutenant Pyrie said last night, "and at a later date hold interunit competitions."

Made Life Miserable for Pittsburgh Pitchers

The above quartette of the world's champion New York Yankees constitute Miller Huggins' wrecking crew, which was chiefly responsible for the Yanks having the pennant hoisted in their park. They are, reading from left to right: Earl Combs, centre-field; Bob Meusel, left-field; "Columbia" Lou Gehrig, adjudged the most valuable player in the major leagues, and the King of Swat himself, George Herman "Babe" Ruth.

LOCAL CYCLISTS TO RIDE ON MAINLAND

Bill Peden and Stan Jackson Will Race in 25-Mile Event for Pacific Coast Championship

VANCOUVER, Oct. 13.—The Vancouver Bicycle Club's annual twenty-five-mile time trial for the Vancouver Exhibition Association's Cup and the Pacific Coast road-racing championship will be staged on the Pacific Highway, just out of New Westminster, on Sunday at 9 a.m.

The start will be immediately south of the New Westminster Bridge across the Fraser. The riders will go twelve and a half miles on the highway and return to the starting point. They will get away at minute intervals. Stewards will be stationed at the turning point to keep traffic in check. A Littlejohn will be in charge of the officials at the turn, while Fred Dealey and A. Y. Douglas will be judges at the finish. L. B. Haskins and Dave Cooke are timekeepers.

PEDEN IS FAVORITE

Victoria's two star distance men, Bill Peden and Stanley Jackson, have already filed their entries. Both are in fine condition. Peden is favored by many to come through on top by reason of his record-breaking performance in the Moody Cup race around Stanley Park last month. Peden is former Washington State ten-mile champion.

Jim Davies, who won the inaugural race for the trophy three years ago, will again be a contender. Davies, who is Canadian sprint champion, is a star distance man of more than ordinary ability and has a great number of supporters.

Leo Marchiori, who finished second to Chester Mills, of Seattle, in last year's race, is also one of the outstanding men competing. Besides these stars, it is best riders among the youngsters will be out to make a bid for championship honors.

NEW YORK, Oct. 13.—The world's series players' melon, amounting to $239,440.87, the greatest in baseball history, was split up into 170 shares by Commissioner K. M. Landis tonight, when he mailed cheques to the competing Yankees, and members of the teams which finished second, third and fourth in the American and National Leagues.

The defeated Pirates have not yet notified the commissioner as to how they want their loser's end divided, with the result that he still is holding $111,943.39, the amount the Pittsburghers got for their disastrous series with the American League champions.

The Yankees split $187,106.08 into twenty-seven shares of $5,782.24. Miller Huggins, manager, and Arthur Fletcher and Charley O'Leary, coaches, each received full shares along with the players. The traveling secretary, trainer and club attendants received checks for portions of shares.

BRITISH FLYWEIGHT CHAMPION IS WINNER

LONDON, Oct. 13.—Johnny Hill, British flyweight champion, defeated Franco Moracchini, of France tonight when the referee stopped the bout in the ninth round.

BADMINTON IS FORGING AHEAD

Game Makes Rapid Growth in City and Most Successful Season In History Anticipated

SIX CLUBS WILL PLAY THIS YEAR

The rapid growth of badminton is shown by the number of clubs functioning in the city. Only a few years ago a lone club was in existence, but today the number has reached an even half dozen, and reports from the secretaries of the various bodies show that the game has taken a strong hold in Victoria.

Play in some clubs is already in progress, and the players have turned out in large numbers for the opening matches. The Garrison Club, rated as one of the strongest in the city, will swing into action in about two weeks, according to Major Hennessey, secretary. Alterations have enlarged their club and will have four full-sized courts at their new home at the Willows. It is expected to commence play about the middle of next week.

Membership, as in the Garrison Club, is being completed rapidly, there being a few vacancies for men players, while a ladies' waiting list is very lengthy at each club.

Playing dates have not been set for the matches at the Willows, as arrangements have to be made with the newly-formed indoor tennis club.

Cedar Hall Club went into action last Monday and interest this year has shown a remarkable increase over last season. The Memorial Hall Club, operating for the third season, is in full swing, and prospects for a successful season look bright. Interclub tournaments will be carried out again this season. Last year some very interesting matches were played.

St. Mark's Club and the newly-formed Anglican Athletic Association team bring the total number of badminton clubs to six.

Miss Carey Wins Handicap Match At Colwood Links

In the final of the Mrs. Angus Campbell handicap tournament, played at Colwood Golf and Country Club yesterday, Miss Ines Carey defeated Mrs. H. F. Grove, four and three. This is the second successive year that Miss Carey has won the trophy, and as a result the cup becomes her permanent property.

Mrs. Wilding won the Class "A" medal round with an 83 net, and Mrs. Rasmussen, with a 93 net, won in "B" class.

KEARNS TO PILOT DEMPSEY

Differences Between Ex-Champion and Former Manager Said to Have Been Ironed Out

WILL GET ONE-THIRD OF TOTAL EARNINGS

NEW YORK, Oct. 13.—The New York Daily News, in a copyrighted story today, says Jack Dempsey and his former manager, Jack Kearns, are about to sign a peace pact, returning Kearns as pilot of the former heavyweight champion.

The reconciliation is expected to take place within ten days, after which Dempsey will return East to talk with Kearns on plans for a barnstorming trip, which will include battles this winter in Chicago, Detroit, Los Angeles and New York.

The Daily News says that under terms of the peace pact as outlined, Kearns has agreed to withdraw all the law suits he has pending against Dempsey, while Dempsey has agreed to sign a long-term contract giving Kearns one-third of all his future earnings.

Since their break after the Dempsey-Firpo fight in 1923, Kearns brought suit for $333,333.33, which is scheduled to come up for preliminary hearing in Trenton, N.J.

Leo P. Flynn is guiding the fortunes of the former champion at present.

LONDON, Oct. 13.—M. Vidmar, of Yugoslavia, a Nimzowitch, of Denmark, and M. Winter, of England, were the winners yesterday in the third round of the international chess masters' tournament at the British Empire Club.

The other three games of the round were drawn, one being that between Marshall, the American champion and Morozhukov, of Germany. These two played for thirty-six moves and then agreed to divide the point. Marshall conducted the white side of a queen's pawn opening.

Fight Pictures Trial Fixed for October 21

VANCOUVER, Oct. 13.—Injunction, which enjoins J. L. Horan & Nichols Theatre, Limited, from exhibiting motion pictures of the recent Tunney-Dempsey fight was continued by Mr. Justice Morrison in Supreme Court today until trial, which has been fixed for October 21. The plaintiff, Canadian Educational Film Company, Limited, of Toronto, claims the sole distributing rights of the pictures in Canada.

That the pictures, which defendants proposed to show in their Vancouver and Victoria theatres, were "bootlegged" was hinted by Mr. A. Alexander, counsel for plaintiff.

Miss Marion Wilson Wins Class "A" Title By Fourteen Strokes

Last Year's City Champion Finishes With Gross 349—Mrs. Philbrick Second and Mrs. Rithet Third—Mrs. C. E. Wilson and Mrs. Price in "B" Final

Miss Marion Wilson, with a gross score of 349 for the seventy-two holes of medal play, won the Class "A" championship of the Victoria Golf Club, which was completed yesterday. Miss Wilson was fourteen strokes better than her nearest rival, Mrs. Philbrick, who finished with a gross 363. Mrs. Jack Rithet displaced Mrs. Parry for third place when the latter required 402 against Mrs. Rithet's 355 in the last round.

Miss Wilson also won the prize for the best net score with 313. Mrs. H. A. Ross was second with 321, and Mrs. Rithet third with 330.

PLAYED CONSISTENT GOLF

Miss Wilson in winning the championship, displayed consistent golf throughout. Her first round of eighty-two was seven strokes better than any other competitor made in the tournament. With a seven-stroke lead on the field at the end of the first eighteen, she held her lead by shooting a ninety-two on the second, the same as Mrs. Philbrick, who rested in second place, extended it to ten on the third round with the net score of 100. Her performance is most commendable, due to the fact that she was forced to give up the game for several months on account of illness. Miss Wilson was last year's city champion and only returned to the game a few weeks before the last city championship.

Mrs. Philbrick, the runner-up, also played steady golf, as shown by her scores, 80, 92, 91, 91. Mrs. Rithet, who finished third, showed an improvement on every round after the first, cutting two strokes off on the second and third rounds and repeating her score of the third in the final round. Mrs. Parry held a three-stroke lead at the end of the third round, but slipped on the last and took 102, her worst score of the tournament. Mrs. H. A. Ross finished fifth.

"B" MEDALIST DEFEATED

Miss Mary Campbell, the medalist in the qualifying round of the Class "B" championship, was eliminated in the semi-finals by Mrs. Charles Wilson, four and two. Mrs. Wilson will meet Mrs. A. V. Price, who defeated Mrs. Barber-Starkey, three and one, for the championship over eighteen holes, commencing this afternoon at 1:30 o'clock. Miss Ruth McBride and Mrs. Squire will battle for the honors in the first flight. The former disposed of Mrs. Harry Davis, one up, in the semi-finals, while the latter accounted for Mrs. Boyd, five and three.

The second flight prize went to Mrs. W. P. Unsworth, who defeated Miss Forman in the finals, three and two.

WHERE WILL PITTSBURGH OUTCAST GO?

Hazen Cuyler's Case Features Opening of Hot Stove League—Chicago Fans Organize Club

MACK GIVES ZACH WHEAT RELEASE

Ty Cobb May Not Go Back With Athletics—Size of Salary May Influence Re-engagement of Georgian

NEW YORK, Oct. 13.—The 1927-1928 seasons of baseball's "hot stove league" may not develop as startling food for winter fans as last year, but there are already a number of shifts in prospect.

The fate of Kiki Cuyler, Pirate outfield star, who warmed the bench during the world series, has aroused especially keen speculation on the assumption that Pittsburgh, for reasons best known to its own officials, will not keep him another year.

Cincinnati and Brooklyn are most often mentioned as likely to get Cuyler, while Chicago fans have organized a "We Want Kiki Cuyler" club.

NOT LIKELY FOR CUBS
Baseball men, however, do not expect the Pirates to let Cuyler go to the Cubs, Giants or Cardinals and thus strengthen the three teams which gave Pittsburgh the hottest chase for this year's pennant.

Cincinnati, it is suggested, might trade George Kelly, first baseman, and a pitcher for Cuyler, since the illness of Joe Harris this season may prevent him from being a regular again for the Pirates next year. Brooklyn has an excellent collection of pitching talent, which might interest the Pirates in any talk of trade, but the Robins need such twirlers as Vance, Petty and Donk as badly as they do outfielders.

ZACH WHEAT DROPPED
Connie Mack already has released Zach Wheat, veteran outfielder and former National League star, and "Baby Doll" Jacobson unconditionally and there is a question whether Ty Cobb will be back on the job for the Athletics in 1928.

The size of Cobb's salary, variously estimated at from $40,000 to $60,000 for 1927, is understood to be an item which may influence the Athletics against re-engaging the famous Georgian.

Before the start of this season, Cobb declared he wanted to have one more good year and then retire. He accomplished this purpose, most observers agree.

NEWMARKET, Eng., Oct. 13.—Three women jockeys were the sole riders today in the 261st race for the historic town plate established and endowed by Charles II.

In order not to clash with the regular races run on the famous heath, the town plate race, over a course of four miles, started early and resulted in a victory for Miss D. Saunders on her horse Fair Toy. Miss Rickaby, riding Major Rastick's Happy Greeting, was second, and Miss Eileen Joel, on Walter Earl's Hogier, was third.

Returns to Game; Wins Hertfordshire Golf Title

ABE MITCHELL

TOTTENHAM, Eng., Oct. 13.—Abe Mitchell, who has been out of active golf competition since last spring when he had an operation for appendicitis, started his comeback in British professional golf by winning the Hertfordshire open championship today.

To score 141, Mitchell turned in a round of 67, making a new competitive course record. He was around in 74 for the first eighteen holes.

Mitchell, named to captain the British Ryder Cup team, was unable to visit the United States with his fellow British pros, as he had not sufficiently recovered from the effects of the operation. Ted Ray succeeded him as captain in the international matches at Worcester, Mass., May 12.

CHAMPS VS. CELLARITES
Newcastle United, league champions, meet Wednesday, the lowly Sheffield club, which is in a cellar position, and which is not expected to provide much opposition. Everton will have Liverpool as their guests and form indicates that a good game may result. Cardiff City, cup holders, and Manchester United on the former's ground, also is thought to be a well balanced affair. Arsenal meets Leicester City, and critics think as the Gunners are at home they should win.

The melee between Manchester City, divisional leaders, and Preston North End, at Manchester, in the Second Division fixture, is looked to provide a spirited contest, while Clapton Orient at Stoke City finds the prophets silent on the likely winner.

Division teams in the scramble for top place, Chelsea, performs at Southampton and are picked as winners.

Pharamond won by a head from Aga Khan's Barziz, who was just a short head in front of S. An. Moor Hills. Eight went the six furlongs.

The odds were 7 to 2, 10 to 3 and 6 to 1. The race was worth upwards of $20,000.

Grips Differ But Purpose Is the Same

By SOL METZGER
Styles change in sport, as in dress. In golf every new titleholder popularizes something in the way of a method of play. Take grips, as an example. The first grip used was the palm grip, which can be a finger grip as well. Abe Mitchell popularized it abroad by reason of his hard hitting. Cecil Leitch also used it for certain shots. In America, Chick Evans is partial to it. Result, following 1916 the palm grip was in vogue.

Before that, Outmet did much to further the interlocking grip by dint of his victories in 1913 and 1914 respectively in the U.S. Open and U.S. Amateur. But the interlocking grip had troubles holding its own until Sarason won the U.S. Open with it at Skokie.

The great majority of golfers, even the topnotchers, prefer the overlapping grip. Jones, Armour, Hagen, Sweetser, Von Elm and Collett use it and recommend it. It seems best in the long run.

The grip is important, and should be with the fingers. It is the means of transferring your hitting power to the club. A brief test is necessary to clear a few pertinent facts about the grip. Grip anything with a hand. You will find that most power is applied toward the rear, with the little finger predominating. Touch anything and you use the tip of the first finger and thumb to feel it.

Now note your grip on the golf club. The little finger of the right hand—the little grip—the handle—can't that prove that your left hand must predominate in the golf swing?

International Football Games May Be Played

VANCOUVER, Oct. 13.—Washington Huskies and British Columbia Lions may renew international rivalry on the football field.

University of Washington's Freshman American football team may play the University of B. C.'s Canadian Rugby team in Vancouver in a Rugby match on November 7, Thanksgiving Day, if negotiations now being carried on go through, according to announcement made by Jack Bentham, secretary of the "Big Four" Canadian Rugby League, this afternoon.

Dempsey Scores K.O.; Ref. Wouldn't Count

By AL DEMAREE
(Former Pitcher, New York Giants)

Achieving the master strokes of sport occasionally does not seem to be as difficult as getting official recognition for that achievement. The main object of a prizefight is the knockout, but in the Dempsey-Tunney fight at Chicago recently, Jack floored Gene for fourteen seconds, yet got credit only for a count of nine, and eventually lost the decision on points.

I have seen but one incident analogous to Dempsey's knockout that wasn't a knockout. In a game I pitched once for the New York Giants, we went into the last of the twelfth with the score tied 0 to 0, and filled the bases with one out. It was my turn to bat, so McGraw sent in "Moose" McCormick to bat for me.

As Umpire Bill Klem turned aside to announce that McCormick was batting for Demaree, a ball was pitched and "Moose" hit for a triple, three runners scoring, although only one was needed to win the game. Everybody left the park, but about forty-five minutes later, Klem called the teams back to the field, stationed every man where he was and made the pitcher pitch again to McCormick, because Klem declared he never saw that ball pitched. Well, this time McCormick hit into a double play! The game was then called on account of darkness!

UGLY GIRLS WORST WIVES

Ugly girls make the worst wives, according to the latest prison report in Japan. The moral for Nippon's young men appears to be not to marry ugly girls, but to choose the prettiest they can find. At all events, this is the advice of the prison authorities at Tochigi Prefecture. They declare that the majority of criminal women are ugly. But officials say that perhaps there are not many ugly girls in Japan, for women inmates of Japanese prisons number only 910 in comparison with a total of more than 41,000 men.

"BARON BOY" VERY STRONG

A strange story of South Africa has set London talking. About twenty-five years ago two of the Cape Police, while hunting baboons, caught one of the laggards, only to find that it was a well grown native boy. He was unable to talk and disliked normal food. He scurried on all fours and it was difficult to teach him to use his legs as the sole means of locomotion. Today he speaks English, can run a ten-mile errand and can lift and carry enormous weights. He remembers being taken from his kral when a baby and cared for by a baboon foster-mother.

LONDON, Oct. 13.—Only one game was played today in the International Chess Masters' Tournament at the British Empire Club. The position in the game, which was unfinished from the first round, was considered favorable to Colle. The fourth round will be played tomorrow.

World-Famous Stories

THE DEVIL'S MOTHER-IN-LAW

By FERNAN CABALLERO

(Fernan Caballero is the pen-name of a Spanish writer who was born in 1874 and died in 1927. This author has been called the Spanish Dickens.)

Once upon a time there was a woman who was so ugly that her face was like to crack in two, and she had such a bad temper that Job himself could not have endured her. However, she was as neat as a pin and industrious as an ant, but her daughter Pamfilla was so lazy that an earthquake could not have roused her. So her mother, who was nicknamed "Aunt Holofernes," scolded her from morning till night.

Then one day Aunt Holofernes called to Pamfilla: the girl was listening to the foolish words of a young man. Due to the girl's delay a kettle fell on the mother's foot.

"You wicked, good-for-nothing, love-sick girl!" cried Aunt Holofernes, then, in a towering rage. "You think of nothing but falling in love and getting married. I wish to Heaven that you'd marry the devil!"

Not long after this a most handsome lover presented himself. He was young, well-behaved, and had well-filled pockets. Even Aunt Holofernes could find nothing in him to object to. Pamfilla was half wild with delight, and preparations were made for the wedding.

At once Pamfilla began to talk about this stranger, though he was very polite, well-bred and clever. Then Aunt Holofernes began to distrust her prospective son-in-law. She thought she could detect certain suspicious protuberances under his innocent looking red hair, and she recollected with uneasiness the curse she had pronounced upon her daughter.

Then came the wedding, and afterward, when the bridal pair were about to retire to their apartment, Aunt Holofernes said to Pamfilla: "When you go into your room shut all the doors and windows, stop up every hole and crack except the keyhole, and take this branch of blessed olive. Beat your husband with the olive branch. Keep on till I tell you to stop. This ceremony is never omitted at weddings, my dear."

Pamfilla, obedient for once, did as she was told. As soon as the bridegroom caught sight of the olive branch he turned to run away. Finding no opening save the key-hole, he slipped into it—and found himself in a little bottle, which his mother-in-law was holding ready to receive him when he came through. For Aunt Holofernes had guessed that this spruce-looking young man was no less than the devil himself, who had taken advantage of the power given him by Aunt Holofernes' unwary curse.

Aunt Holofernes sealed up the bottle and took it to a high mountain, on top of which she left it, with the devil securely imprisoned. There his highness stayed for ten years.

The world was a wonderful place those ten years—every man minded his own business, nobody stole or lied, and crime became a word without meaning. But such happiness could not last. A soldier named Briones arrived on the mountain top and was surprised to find the bottle, which was of good size. He picked it up and holding it to the light saw in it the devil, who had dried and withered till he looked like a dried plum.

"Let me out, gallant warrior," said the devil, "and I will grant you any favor you may ask of me. I'm the devil."

"I want my discharge," said the soldier.

"You shall have it," said the devil. But as Briones started to pull out the stopper he smelled such an odor of brimstone that he hastily pushed it back in again. Then he thought he might as well do a little bargaining.

"I want four dollars a day as long as I live," said Briones.

"By Satan, by Beelzebub, by Lucifer," cried the devil, "I have no money to give you!"

"You must find it, then, or I won't let you out," said Briones.

"Very well, I'll help you to get it," said the devil.

"How do I know you'll keep your word?" asked Briones.

"You impudent wretch!" cried the devil. "If I ever get out I'll teach you—but I'll keep my word. I assure you. Just pull out the stopper."

Briones hesitated, but the devil pleaded so hard that the soldier finally took the risk and opened the bottle.

"Now," said the devil, "there is the plan. I'm going to slip the throat of the princess, whom the king, her father loves to distraction, and I shall cause her such pain that no doctor can cure her. Then you must present yourself, offering to effect a cure for a pension of as many dollars a day as you may want, and I will come out. So our accounts will be settled."

Everything occurred as the devil had planned it. The princess took to her bed, convulsed with pain, and the king was in agonies of anxiety about her. Briones presented himself with all the effrontery of a man who knows that the devil is helping him. The king accepted his service on one condition, which was that if he did not cure the princess in three days, as he positively promised to do, the presumptuous doctor should be hanged.

Briones, certain of success, agreed to these terms, but unfortunately the devil heard the agreement and jumped with joy when he saw a chance to revenge himself on the soldier. The devil's jump gave the princess so much pain that she screamed for the doctor. The next day the same scene occurred, and Briones saw that the devil intended to let him hang. But the soldier kept his wits about him, and the third day when the pretended physician arrived, a gallows was being erected in front of the palace door. When he entered the princess' apartment her sufferings were redoubled, and she cried out to her attendants to take away the impostor.

"My resources are not exhausted," said Briones gravely. "I beg your royal highness to have patience a moment."

Briones had remembered that while the devil was still in the bottle on the mountain top he had uttered imprecations against Aunt Holofernes, whom he called his mother-in-law. Briones thought the woman must have been pretty clever to get the devil into such a fix. So he went now and gave his name in the princess' name, that all the bells in the city should be rung.

When Briones returned to the royal chamber, the devil, who had a mortal dread of bells, and who is, besides, very inquisitive, asked of the soldier:

"What saint are they ringing the bells for?"

"Oh," Briones answered casually, "that is simply because I sent for your mother-in-law, Aunt Holofernes, and they are ringing the bells in honor of her arrival in the city."

The devil no sooner heard that his mother-in-law had come than he slipped and ran so fast that a ray of sunlight could not overtake him, and left Briones, proud as a peacock, and rejoicing in his good fortune. For the princess was cured and the soldier would get the agreed upon pension.

One Act Farce At Crystal Garden

A comedy of sobs and laughter, "The Wet Rag," is one of those clever comedies which carries a laugh in every line and makes one wish that there were three rather than one act to be enjoyed. Mr. Legge-Willis is seen in the role of the frantically jealous husband, while Mrs. Legge-Willis enacts the part of the wife who wins him back with feminine wiles of an extremely interesting nature. The principal play is preceded by a short curtain-raiser entitled, "Home at Last," dealing with some misanthropic incidents in the home-coming of a honeymoon couple. Completing a capital bill there will be selections by the Crystal Garden Orchestra featuring music from two of the most successful musical comedies of the season now playing to crowded houses in New York. After the play the entire audience is invited to adjourn to the south ballroom where dancing continues until midnight.

William McLeod Raine's exciting novel of the alien-smuggling industry has been successfully transferred to the screen by Warner Bros. "The Fighting Edge" is now showing at the Playhouse Theatre. Kenneth Harlan plays the handsome hero of the picture, and Ruth Miller is co-featured in this melodrama of the Mexican border. Peggy Lewis is playing Kitty, the doctor's daughter, in "Over the River Charlie," the stage attraction of the week. She has an interesting part and is heard to advantage in an excellent number, "No Wonder She's a Blushing Bride," and a duet with Will Marshall, "Everything But Trouble." Eileen Bennett is her friend Louise, and sings "Following the Sun Around" beautifully.

COLISEUM The opening act on the Coliseum stage this week at the Coliseum Theatre is Ralph Sarsfield, the strolling entertainer, offering songs and story of the very best, and he surely receives hearty applause. Next is a dramatic sketch, and in the cast are George Durkan and Eileen Allwood. Sid Bruce, and closing the bill are the Colman Sisters, in songs and dances, new and old. On the screen is the best picture that has been shown on this screen in a long time. The tense, dramatic story of a Normandy farm girl who is irresistibly attracted by and forced in spite of all insinuating hatreds to love a war-time German prisoner. The Pola Negri's starring vehicle for Paramount in "Barbed Wire." As Mona, the French girl, Miss Negri deals with one of the greatest roles of her remarkable career. Clive Brook plays Oskar, the German prisoner.

CAPITOL Bryant Washburn, sometime actor, is the "youngest" veteran actor of the screen. "Chang" is coming to town. Those who miss it have only themselves to blame. "Chang" is the wildest of the wild and the mightiest of the mighty! Paramount can well call another notch in its belt. It is not very often that a picture of the magnitude, entertainment value or true epic bigness of "Chang" comes along. Because of this, it towers head and shoulders above practically everything which has come to local screens during the past year.

"Chang" tells no ordinary tale. There is nothing at all stereotyped about "Chang." It is just one thrill after another, a whole series of them; one gasp after another, a whole parade of them. If you should ask that "Chang" be described in one short, terse phrase, we'd call it a mighty melodrama of the wild. A leopard leaps over a high wall into the hero's home, a tiger hurls itself right into the eye of the camera; four hundred ponderous, stampeding elephants attack a native village, leaving nothing but desolation and death in their wake and—that only starts to tell what "Chang" holds in store for moviegoers. It holds one punch after another and attention is never allowed to wander. When "Chang" was given a preview in New York, critics acclaimed and called it a road show picture. "Chang" will be shown at the Dominion Theatre next week at popular prices. Don't pass it by!

Canada expects that its buildings constructed this year will be seven per cent greater in value than those erected in 1926.

South African Flag

LONDON, Oct. 13.—J. S. Smuts, High Commissioner for South Africa in London, has taken up the cudgels on behalf of the Nationalist Government over the flag question. In an interview at Aberdeen he pointed out that there was no Union Jack on Scotland's distinctive national symbol, yet nobody would ever call the Scotsman disloyal or suggest that the Scottish people wanted to secede because they did not incorporate the Union Jack on their national flag.

"It is exactly the same with us in South Africa," he continued. "What we, as the Dominion of South Africa, want, is a distinctive symbol."

NANAIMO, Oct. 13.—A pretty wedding took place yesterday morning at First United Church, St. Andrew's, when Eva May, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. Winthrop, Extension, became the bride of Mr. William Godfrey, youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. William Godfrey, also of Extension, Rev. Hugh Nixon officiated.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, looked charming in a sand-colored georgette dress, trimmed with silver lace, with which she wore a large picture hat of the same shade, faced with pale pink. Her only ornament was a string of pearls, the gift of the groom, and she carried a bouquet of Ophelia roses and fern. Miss Lillian Winthrop, sister of the bride, acted as bridesmaid, wearing a blue flat crepe dress and blue picture hat to match. Her bouquet was of carnations and fern. The groom was supported by Mr. Samuel Wright.

The church was very prettily decorated for the occasion with a profusion of gladioli and fern, and a decorated arch in front of the altar, from which hung a large wedding bell. The church was filled to capacity by friends and relatives of the contracting parties.

The bride entered the church on the arm of her father, who gave her in marriage, and she looked charming in her bridal gown of white crepe roman, heavily embroidered with silk and wearing a traditional wedding veil with coronet of orange blossoms. Her wedding bouquet was composed of sweetheart roses and lilies of the valley. Mrs. A. Honeyman, a sister of the bride, was matron of honor, and was very prettily gowned in turquoise blue, over apricot, trimmed with blue satin and ribbon, with large picture hat en suite. She carried a bouquet of American Beauty roses. The groom was supported by his brother, Mr. Donald Old, Little Campbell. COURTENAY AFTER MORE PUBLICITY

Board of Trade Hears Report of Chambers of Commerce Convention

COURTENAY, Oct. 13.—At the meeting of the Courtenay-Comox Board of Trade on Tuesday night, a report was given by the secretary, Mr. C. S. Wood, who had been a delegate to the second annual convention of the Canadian Chambers of Commerce, held recently in the Vancouver Chamber.

This was for the purpose of gathering all boards of trade together with a view to co-operating to a common end. The outstanding feature learned at the convention was the advisability and economical necessity for more extensive advertising of the city and district. Several of the members present agreed to furnish the publicity committee with suitable photographs and engravings, some of which will be sent to Mr. Webster, publicity commissioner of Vancouver, who has agreed to display them.

Among the island delegates to the convention were four from Duncan, one from Malahat, two from Victoria and one from Nanaimo, besides the Courtenay delegate. It was estimated that the 500 delegates present represented a capital of over five hundred millions. The visitors from Quebec and other parts of Eastern Canada were astonished at, and loud in their praise of the wonderful scenery and opportunities of British Columbia. It was learned that Ontario now considers her tourist trade as one of her important industries; and that the tourist traffic has become an important industry in British Columbia will be observed when it is noted that this class of visitor left $300,000 in the province during the last year. When asked which features of this district would be of most interest to the tourists, Mr. Webster gave as his opinion those which are peculiar to the district.

trict, as for instance, the patches of red snow to be found in the mountains behind Courtenay. Indian carvings on rocks, totem poles, etc.

The correspondence included letters from George I. Warren, publicity agent for Victoria, concerning suitable photographs for Warner Brothers Pictures, Incorporated, Los Angeles. Mr. G. H. Kirk, member of the board, by whom the recently-published pamphlet was largely prepared, wrote from England, where he has been undergoing an operation, giving a short report and statement for his committee and asking for a supply of the pamphlet. An expression of thanks was made to Mr. Kirk for his work in this connection and that the members conveyed their best wishes for his speedy recovery.

A number of letters of inquiry received from different parts of Canada were turned over to Mr. E. R. Bewell, a member of the agriculture committee. New members in the persons of Mr. Lang, Cumberland, and R. Wilson, of Courtenay, were introduced by Mr. William Douglas, and Mr. A. Primrose by Mr. H. E. Wallis. President E. L. Macdonald is to extend an invitation to Agent-General Pauline to visit the district and address the board if possible.

British Flyer That Broke All Records

The first picture to arrive in this country of the Royal Scot, the British express train which created a world's record for nonstop runs of 209 1/2 miles. The flyer is here seen leaving Carlisle for London. It covered the whole distance in approximately five and one-quarter hours, or an average speed of fifty-seven miles an hour, without a stop.

Scotland and Ireland. They met teams at the Universities of Dublin and Belfast. The tour will take nearly a year and is to be followed by a series of meetings in this country.

Other passengers included Nai Jan Chuk, youthful Chinese, going back to the land of his forefathers with his white bride of eighteen. He recently completed a course in banking at the University of New York and is returning to the National Commercial Bank at Shanghai.

The Chinese youth was reluctant to talk when interviewed. "When we left New York," he said, "the newspapers printed so much about East being East and West being West, that it made me very unhappy. They seemed to forget that love is love, also."

LONDON, Oct. 13.—The Evening News states that William F. T. Le Queux, novelist and authority on the secret service of continental powers, died today at Knocke, Belgium, after several weeks from heart trouble. Le Queux had travelled extensively, collecting material for his stories, visiting Algeria, Morocco, Macedonia, Turkey, Montenegro, Serbia, Albania and many other countries. In wandering off the beaten track he picked up a close knowledge of the secret service of the continental powers and was consulted by the Government at times on such matters. Mr. Le Queux was sixty-three years old. He acted as war correspondent for The Daily Mail in the Balkan War, but since then had devoted his time to novel writing.

The House of Rogues

By CHRISTOPHER B. BOOTH

CHAPTER XV.—(Continued)
"I might as well tell you first as last," said a voice from the doorway "that those finger-prints on the gun are probably mine." It was Bob Dolliver, he having followed them upstairs.

"Your finger-prints, huh!" shouted the sheriff. "Then you admit that you're the man who—"

"This isn't a confession," Dolliver broke in. "It's an explanation." His hands were clenched, his mouth set, realizing that he was badly entangled. "Like a fool I picked up the gun. I don't know why I did that. I—well, I didn't think of finger-prints."

The sheriff sneered. "That part of it's true," he grunted. "You didn't think of the finger-prints. If you'd thought of 'em you'd wiped 'em clean off the gun. It sounds pretty thin to me—an 'I guess you've got a mighty good reason for us not wantin' to know why you was packin' up to leave the house just 'fore Mr. Strawn was murdered.' He paused briefly and then demanded. "What made you come upstairs when I told you to stay down with the rest of 'em?"

"I remembered that I hadn't made it very clear where the plates had been put," Bob answered. "I know that it may sound thin—my explanation of my finger-prints on the gun—but it's true."

"Most foolish thing to do, Dolliver—if true," said J.B. "In addition to inviting suspicion, nothing in this room should have been disturbed. Can you indicate the spot where you picked it up?"

"Yes, I think so; the gun was lying by the corner of the desk. There," he pointed to a spot, some three feet from the body.

"Is there any chance of the gun having belonged to Mr. Strawn?" Baskerville wanted to know.

"I am positive it did not," Mr. Strawn did not own a gun.

"Did you ever see this gun before, Dolliver?"

"Never."

Baskerville studied the young man's averted face for a moment, and then reached his hand toward the sheriff for the fatal weapon. He took from his pocket a folding magnifying glass and looked closely at the signature left by the last hand which had touched it. Practiced as his eyes were in following the formation of the various loops, the finger-prints took on an identity.

"Let me see your hand, Dolliver," he commanded, and after examining the tips of the fingers, nodded.

"Yes, the finger-prints are yours—and there are no others. If there were any before you picked up the gun, as you claim you did, they have been obliterated by your own touch." He turned the gun over slowly and there came into his eyes an animated glow, quickly suppressed, but not before Tommy Oliver had seen this sign of an important discovery.

"Now," he announced, "We'll see what has happened to the plates," he said, Dolliver, that you put them in the desk?"

"Yes, in the top drawer," Bob answered, taking a step to the heavy piece of furniture and testing the drawer with his fingers. "They must still be there for the drawer is locked."

"Open it," ordered Baskerville. "Dolliver took from his pocket a flat leather case containing several keys, his fingers trembling as he selected the right one. The lock clicked faintly and the three other men pressed forward, eyes upon the drawer as it slid open.

"They're gone!" Dolliver shouted in what was either actual or simulated amazement. "The plates and the banknote paper—are gone!"

"If they were ever in there," grunted the sheriff suspiciously. "We only got your word for it that they were put there in the first place—and I guess you got plenty of reason for lying."

Bob Dolliver blinked at the yawning emptiness of the desk drawer. "Yes, I expected they would be," J.B. said quietly. "I certainly did not expect anything else."

"But you don't understand!" protested Bob. "The drawer was locked—and only Mr. Strawn and I had keys for it!" His face went a shade more pale as he realized the construction that was likely to be placed upon this circumstance. "Great God!" he cried. "You don't believe me; you don't think that I—that I took the plates!"

"Of course you did!" retorted the sheriff with a snort. "Any dang fool could see that. You took 'em tryin' to make out that it was this here three-fingered man done the murder."

"I always try to keep my mind open," said J.B., "I never accuse a man until I have the evidence. Three things are possible; that Dolliver is lying, that Strawn himself removed the plates or that some other person took them after unlocking the drawer with the dead man's key."

"Aw, J.B.?" protested Tommy Oliver, "that last one won't swallow. The murderer wouldn't have relocked the drawer; he wouldn't have dared take the time to do that. That's rot!"

"Perhaps it is, lad," admitted Baskerville. "I'll admit that it doesn't sound reasonable."

"And if I had taken the plates," cried Dolliver, seizing upon an argument for his own defence. "I had taken the plates in an effort to make it appear that they had been stolen, wouldn't I have left it wide open?"

"Mebbe you would and then mebbe you wouldn't," said the sheriff. "Polks do queer things when they're all excited."

Baskerville's attention returned to the gun which he still held in his hand by the barrel; apparently he had no further interest in the mystery of the locked drawer—at least not for the present.

"Tommy," he said quietly, "I wish that you would go down stairs and tell Jagers, the butler, that he's wanted up here."

Tommy Oliver knew that J.B. had discovered something, that the gun had given a clue other than the finger-prints and that this clue in some way involved Jagers. Although he longed to ask questions, he knew the quickest way to know the answer was to fetch the butler, so he scurried to the door and hurried into the hall and down the stairs.

The sheriff, plainly nettled, turned indignantly upon Baskerville.

"Ain't I in charge of this case?" he demanded pettily. "If there's any sendin' to be done, I'll do it. Why are you sendin' for this Jagers feller anyhow?"

"Perhaps I should have had you execute the order, Sheriff," J.B. answered pleasantly, "but I don't think any harm has been done. Let's not quarrel about such a trifle." He turned to Bob Dolliver. "Do you happen to know Jagers' first name?"

Bob shook his head.

"No, I don't believe I do; I never heard him called by any name other than Jagers. Mr. Strawn paid his wages in cash and for that reason I have never had occasion to write the butler's name on a cheque. He was employed as watchman by the real estate firm from whom Mr. Strawn bought the house and Mr. Strawn let him stay on as a butler."

"What's Jagers' first name to do with this business?" Edwards inquired. "You ain't got no right keepin' me in the dark."

Baskerville toyed with the gun absently.

"You'll not be in the dark much longer, Sheriff," he said. "I think you'll understand, too, one reason for Jagers' extreme nervousness. Just how much there is behind it I don't know." The sheriff muttered fumingly and gave J.B. a glare of malignant dislike. There fell a brief silence while they awaited the butler; a moment later the man appeared in the doorway, his massive head bobbing jerkily, his normally protruding eyes about to drop clear of their sockets.

"You sent for me?" he quavered, his gaze lifting for a furtive moment toward the sheriff. Baskerville stood by the desk, the pistol for the purpose of the moment concealed from view.

"I sent for you, Jagers," he said

"I wanted to ask you what is your first name."

"My—first name?" gulped the butler. "Exactly, Jagers, your given name. Perhaps it's George?"

"The butler started, startled, and let his head jerk forward in a silent confirmation of this guess.

"All right, George Jagers," said Baskerville, moving the gun into sight. "I want you to tell us how this pistol of yours got into the study." He took a step forward and held the weapon in front of the man's horrified gaze. Jagers staggered back with such violence that his head cracked noisily against the wall.

"My—my gun?" he cried hoarsely. "You—you must be mistaken, sir; it—it isn't my gun. I'll take oath on it, sir, that it isn't my gun. I—I never saw it before." But his face gave the lie to his denial.

"It's no use, Jagers," Baskerville said sternly. "You're forgetting that quite a long time ago, so long that the knife scratches are almost too faint to be seen—you scratched your initials on this gun. Here they are, G.J. on one of the butt-plates. And this is the gun that killed John Strawn!"

A terrible scream rose from Jagers' throat and rang wildly through the gloomy old house; it must have chilled the blood of those three women downstairs, their nerves already strained to the breaking point; the man's state was almost pitiful and his lips moved soundlessly as he tried to speak.

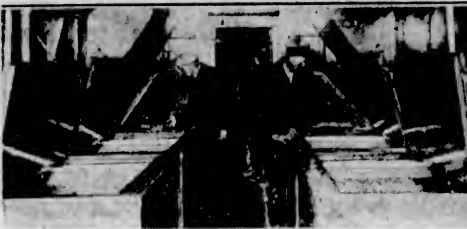

Sherriff Edwards reached to the jagging pocket of his coat, dragging forth a pair of rusty handcuffs. "You're under arrest!" he shouted.

"You're under arrest, Jagers for the murder of John Strawn!" Jagers quailed but found voice.

"No!" he shrieked. "No! I'll tell the truth. I—I was afraid to tell the truth. I was lyin' about the gun. It's mine. But I didn't kill him; I swear to you that I didn't kill him. Someone took my gun; someone killed Mr. Strawn—with my gun!"

"Swearin' seems to be your long suit," roared the sheriff. "It was your gun an' you're the man. Stick out your hands an' let me put these irons on you." But the handcuffs had rusted shut and refused to open.

TWO hundred thousand speckled trout are traveling, not by water, but by train, from Hornings Mills, Ont., to the Castalia Trout Club in Ohio. The fish, which are destined to provide sport for anglers, made the trip across the border in a specially constructed live fish car under the charge of Supervisor D. L. Stalter, of the Ohio Department of Agriculture.

"Just a minute, Sheriff," interposed Baskerville. "It will do no harm to let Jagers make a statement. Go ahead and talk; we're willing to hear what you've got to say."

Rotary Club Hears Mr. T. O. Mackay in Address on Fire Prevention Needs in Canada

The yearly per capita tax represented by the annual fire loss is equivalent to $4.15 on every man, woman and child in Canada, despite an improvement of thirty per cent since 1922, Mr. T. O. Mackay told members of the Rotary Club at their weekly luncheon at the Empress Hotel yesterday.

Mr. Mackay listed the principal causes of fire, as carelessness with matches and heating apparatus, smokers' carelessness and similar personal oversights by property owners. When a city is seeking new industries, he pointed out, adequate fire protection measures were a compelling attraction of which to boast.

Premier King May Make Address in Washington

OTTAWA, Oct. 13.—It is reported that Premier King has been invited and will deliver an address at the dedication of a memorial in Arlington Cemetery, Washington, D.C., to the Canadian troops who fought in the American Expeditionary Forces during the Great War and gave their lives for the common cause. It has been suggested, and the suggestion is being considered, that the Prime Minister be escorted by a contingent of Canadian troops at the ceremonies, which will take place on October 29.

PHOTOGRAPHED IN FOG

Photographs showing every detail of the landscape with complete clearness have been taken in an opaque fog, according to J. Baird, the young Scotch inventor of television. He recently exhibited before the British Association in London such photographs and a camera, equipped with his television ray. The special photographic plates are sensitive to the infra-ray of the spectrum-rays—which are invisible to the human eye—and by this means the camera can record pictures through the thickest cloud. Baird predicts that photography and observation in the next war will be carried out by an airplane far above the clouds and hidden from the sight or hearing of the earth below.

POLLY AND HER PAWS

TILLIE THE TOILER

SIR GEORGE BOYLE A BIT SKEPTICAL

Genial Knight Doubts His Chief's Regalia Once Adorned Silt-ting Ball

MONTREAL.—Sir George Boyle, C.B.E., former mayor of Bedford, is probably the only citizen of the old historic English town to be a full-fledged Iroquois chief. On the eve of his return to the Old Country, after traveling some 10,000 miles through Canada with the British Lawn Bowling team, Sir George, wearing the full regalia, including the vast headgear of the proud Mohawks, was solemnly christened at Caughnawaga.

His new name is Twa-ka-wat-ta, meaning "Sunshine," or "Bright Sun."

Sir George left on the Canadian Pacific liner Montclare, and his feathers, Indian pipe and other relics of the Red Men were carefully packed in a special suitcase.

The genial knight, who was honored for his services as recruiting officer during the war in three countries, said in the course of an interview that the headgear was that of no less a personage than the great Sitting Bull—according to the Caughnawaga natives. "But I am just a bit skeptical about that," added Sir George, with a twinkle in his eye.

AMAZED AT CANADA
Sir George Boyle, who has retired after practicing as barrister-at-law for forty years, said that he was amazed at the growth of the Canadian cities since his last visit to the Dominion in 1911. In his travels from coast to coast with the British lawn bowlers, he had been given official reception, luncheons, dinners, teas and garden parties in all parts. The hospitality of the Canadians, he said, was most gratifying, and he was returning to the city where John Bunyan wrote "Pilgrim's Progress," with many pleasant thoughts of his visit to this country.

In politics he is an ardent Liberal, and a close friend, he stated, of Lloyd George. During the war Sir George became recruiting officer for the counties of Bedford, Hertford and Huntingdon, and 11,000 soldiers and 4,000 sailors were recruited through his efforts.

IMMIGRATION PROBLEM
Speaking of the immigration problem in Canada, Sir George made the following observation: "I have an impression that your organization needs tightening up to give the British village-bred men and women a start over here. If necessary with a loan, accompanied by proper supervision and tuition on the lines of the Australian Elder Brotherhood movement. They should be taught Musson's doctrine, namely, that salvation to the individual as well as to the nation can only come by discipline, sacrifice and hard work."

Sir George Boyle stated that he is interested in a chain of sixteen English rural newspapers. In his young days he contributed articles to the press—as he put it: "Many a young English barrister turns for a time to journalism in search of the elusive guinea."

LAUNCHING OF GIANT DOCK
The remaining four sections of the giant pontoon dock for the British navy at Singapore will be launched at Newcastle-on-Tyne before the end of the year, and it is hoped to complete the dock by May, 1928. The first three sections were launched last July. More than 20,000 tons of steel and 3,500,000 rivets will be used before the dock is finished. The sections will be fitted together in the water and tested, then divided in two and towed to Singapore through the Suez Canal.

MEXICO CITY, Oct. 13.—General Arnulfo Gomez, rebel leader sought by the Government in Vera Cruz State, is accompanied only by mountaineers according to officers heading the 600 surrendered soldiers of General Hector Almaraz's column who have arrived at Jalapa, capital of the state. They are being pursued by federal troops.

Earl of Wilton Dies
LONDON, Oct. 13.—The Earl of Wilton (Seymour Edward Frederick Egerton), died today. He was thirty-two years old. He succeeded to the title in 1915.

In 1917 the Earl of Wilton married Brenda, daughter of Sir William Petersen, chairman of Petersen & Company, shipowners, London, who died in Ottawa on June 12, 1925. One son and one daughter were born to them.

The Wilton family have been prominent patrons of horse racing for generations, and the deceased Earl was reputed one of the most sensational plungers on horse races known on the turf in years.
